If Goethe Read Them Mr. Thaw's Prayer Diamonds at Home A Hindu Worth While

By Arthur Brisbane

GOETHE SAID the best way to Germanize territory taken from Poland was to send German plays and players to inspire respect for the German ideas and language.

What would Goethe think of these, chosen from titles of plays now advertised in New York?

"Liars," "Loose Ankles," "One Man's Woman," "Cradle Snatchers," "Laff That Off," "If I Was Rich," "Sex," "She Couldn't Say No," "The Adorable Liar."

ANOTHER TITLE, "My Country," strikes your eye, and your mind turns to patriotism. Then you read, "It is the Nation's laugh hit."

THEY SAY EURIPIDES' "Bacchus" was played in Athens for five hundred years. It wouldn't play twice in New York unless George Cohan rewrote it, and Shubert or Ziegfeld organized such a chorus of Bacchae as Dionysus never dreamed of.

HARRY K. THAW, who killed Stanford White, and has since attracted attention, writes an autobiography that "cost him $35,000," a large price.

Mr. Thaw says his lawyer was a traitor, but doesn't name the lawyer. He had several. He says the lawyer was worse than Stanford White. And the night after he killed White he prayed that the latter might go to Heaven. It would be interesting to know what memoranda the Angel Gabriel wrote on the margin of that prayer.

INSTALLMENT PLAN FOR AUTO INSURANCE O.K.'D.

Fears of thousands of automobile owners were set at rest today when it was announced the new compulsory insurance may be purchased on installments, and that the additional property damage policies will not raise the total cost above present rates.

Insurance companies also gave their interpretation of the $2 territorial charge as being coverage for private ways and private property in the Commonwealth as well as outside the state.

They declared that, taken as a whole, including property damage and liability, the new rates going into effect January 1 were about 25 per cent. less in Boston than the prevailing rates, and from 10 to 15 per cent. less outside the Boston area.

EXPECT POLICY RUSH.

This divergence is explained by the fact that at present insurance companies charge lower rates for suburban and country districts than they do for the metropolis.

In this connection representatives of insurance companies expressed the belief that present property damage charges may be reduced in the future to correspond with the new rates.

The companies are planning for a tremendous rush for the new forms which must be filled and presented at the registry of motor vehicles before plates can be obtained.

As only one-third of the motorists of the State carry liability and property damage insurance, it is estimated approximately 600,000 persons will seek new policies.

CLERKS SPEEDED.

The companies issued a warning that the first day for obtaining new plates will be October 15, and to take care of the rush the twenty-five or more companies writing the new insurance expect to hire about 1,000 extra clerks.

The forms to be given out by the insurance companies will contain all the information concerning the cars insured, with registration blanks attached. Each form will require the signature of an accredited representative of one of the insurance companies, which will be kept on file at the registry.

It is anticipated that about 200,000 cars will be on the roads January 1, with others following at later intervals.

In this connection the insurance men point to what they claim will work a hardship on many owners

FEAR MORE RIOTS IN STRIKE

Manville, Sept. 2.—The force of militiamen guarding the "Bridge of Death" leading to the Manville-Jenckes Mill was augmented by a fresh detachment of field artillery today as State authorities anxiously awaited the outcome of a peace conference in the office of Governor Aram J. Pothier at Providence.

Rumors that dynamite was being imported by radicals for the purpose of destroying the bridge caused alarm and soldiers were placed underneath it and at vantage points in the vicinity to watch its approaches.

After listening to an impassioned plea for peace from President Thomas G. MacMahon of the United Textile Workers of America, Governor Pothier arranged a meeting of company officials and strike leaders to take place late this afternoon.

Governor Pothier said he hoped that a settlement of the strike would Seminara, one of the most prominent Italians of Boston, is a relative of Valentino and was one of his closest friends.

One of the reasons why he went to New York, he has told the Boston Evening American exclusively, was to delve into rumors of poisoning in the Valentino death and clear this matter up in the public mind and for the relatives.

WARREN BROS. CALLED IN HUB GRAFT PROBE

As a result of the refusal of Warren Bros. Co. to submit their books to an accountant selected by District Attorney O'Brien, officials of the company were today summoned to appear tomorrow before the Grand Jury investigating the so-called city graft probe.

John Dearborn, president; Everett Sutcliff, treasurer, and Herbert M. Warren were ordered to produce ledgers, cash books, journals, purchase books, checkbooks and cancelled checks from June, 1925, to date.

The grand jurors are to convene as the result of an order issued by Judge Quilin of Superior Court at the request of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien.

A sudden development in the inquiry caused a shift in plan, instead of waiting until the regular September session date on Tuesday.

The decision came close upon the heels of the refusal of the Warren Brothers Company to submit its books for examination by Edwin L. Pride, the certified accountant, who has been assigned to the case by District Attorney O'Brien.

It was announced today that city officials, contractors and any persons desiring to volunteer information would be called before the grand jury.

Official admission by District Attorney O'Brien that he is leaving no stone unturned in his hunt for "heavies," was made in his correspondence with counsel for Warren Brothers Company when he wrote:

"A complaint has been made to me that the profits of your clients have been used in large part to pay approval.

RIPLEY SAYS IDEALS GUIDE WALL STREET

Prof. William Z. Ripley of Harvard, interviewed by the Boston News Bureau, denied he had any intention of attacking Wall Street in his recent "Stop, Look and Listen" articles. He declared officials of the Exchange were guided by the highest ideals.

Prof. Ripley stated he was preparing a third article, this time on public utilities. He declared the investor was entitled to know what he was buying and to the reasonable expectation that a fair market for the security was maintained. He would therefore have balance sheets and earnings statements tell the whole truth, finding publicity an aid to investment.

"Wall Street is as honest as any other place," he said, "but in any gathering of men there are always some who abuse their position. One black sheep in Wall Sheep can do

WAR SECTOR AT MANVILLE UNDER MUZZLES OF MACHINE GUNS TO KEEP CROWD OF STRIKERS IN CONTROL

State troops with rapid-fire gun entrenched behind cotton bales like Gen. Andrew Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, when he repulsed the British with his flint locks and squirrel rifles.

CROWD AT BARBED WIRE GATES
Stern guard was relaxed somewhat at the bridge as peace talk circulated, but only a few of the quietest were allowed to trickle through. The rest wandered about gazing curiously at the frowning guns.

STRIKE LEADERS CONFER ON GOVERNOR'S PEACE TERMS

He made it a point that Horace C. Valois, president of the loomfixers' local union and one of the veteran employes whose discharge is one of the issues in the strike, be present.

FEW MORE RIOTING.

If these negotiations broke down, said the last negotiations before a Federal conciliator, the military authorities feared renewed rioting and were prepared for it with additional troops.

A community store, equipped with food by funds collected through the State by girl strikers, was opened for the relief of strikers' families desperately in need of food.

Action by the executive council of the loomfixers' union and by the strikers themselves in mass meeting assembled, on a new peace plan offered by the company, was postponed during progress of the negotiations at the State House.

President MacMahon went to the Governor's office at the request of the chief executive, taking with him Thomas E. Shannon, president of the Rhode Island branch, A. F. of L., and Francis J. Gorman, State organizer for the federation. State Senator John A. Powers of Woonsocket was also present.

"This entire affair is a schoolboy matter that could be easily settled in five minutes with a little level headed discussion on peaceful terms," said MacMahon.

Senator Powers deplored the breakdown of previous peace negotiations, simply because the company refused to discharge three nonunion loomfixers recently imported from Pawtucket and insisted on the discharge of five union veterans.

After arrangements had been completed for the later conference of all parties, Governor Pothier told the Boston Evening American he believed peace would result before another day.

Rumors of dynamiting are said to have originated from strike sympathizers who are alleged to have boasted openly that "high explosive men" were on their way to Manville and that they would sneak up to the bridge by way of the river.

On the bridge itself four parapets have been erected out of huge cotton bales, obtained from the mill, and machine guns mounted on each of these parapets. Two are at either end of the bridge, protected by barbed wire barriers, and two toward the center. Armed guards are on duty at each parapet.

GUARD RELAXED.

The stern guard on the bridge was relaxed somewhat as peace talk circulated and strikers were allowed to trickle past the barrier in small groups. A strict watch was kept to prevent any gathering. The strikers silently inspected the heavy Browning machine guns and other paraphernalia and then passed on.

A second peace move was underway with local businessmen and civil leaders cooperating to effect a settlement of the strike. State Representative Alphonse Gauvin of Lincoln, one of these men, said: "The strike will be settled today, in my opinion."

The National Guard forces were increased by thirty more men from the 103rd Artillery, increasing the troops to 100. The entire force is under command of Major Francis W. Rollins, and it was Major Rollins who early today ordered the guards increased on the dynamiting rumor.

Visitors to Manville included Captain Mark F. Ranopier and other officers of Troop A, Rhode Island Cavalry, mobilized in Providence and ready to come here in case of further rioting. It has been found that cavalry operates better against a mob than other branches of the service.

Manville today resembles one of the near-front-line villages of France during the war. In full battle equipment, steel helmets, rifles, extra rounds of ammunition, the guardsmen are patrolling the town. Soup kitchens have been brought up to cook the food for the troops, and a number of machine guns are in place. The barricades resemble somewhat the trenches of the Argonne.

BRIDGE GIVEN NAME.

Catch-words are of supreme importance in a political campaign. A trick, or revolt, and the Manville strikers are no exception to the rule. The Blackstone bridge, where the desperate fighting occurred between the State troopers and the mob Tuesday night, has now become the "Bridge of Death." This although no one was killed there. However, fourteen were injured in the fighting, the greatest number by riot guns or shotgun bullets.

All roads in Manville lead to the "Bridge of Death." Behind its barricades, in the centre of which spectators large enough to admit a truck have been left, the guardsmen on duty grimly pace up and down. During the night these sentries are closed and no one is allowed on the bridge. At each end there is just one small entrance through which a single person may pass, if the guards permit.

Outside the barricades a large throng of strikers and sympathizers gathered.

Strike Peace Only Hope of Hungry Children

By VICTORINE BELANGER.

Manville, R. I., Sept. 2.—Poverty stalks here as a result of the strike.

I found several houses in the foreign district, each occupied by a widow and her brood of eight, nine or more children, where there was not so much as a crust of bread for the next meal.

The families were living on hope of peace alone. Nine children clamored for food in the house occupied by Mrs. George Plante, who for two years has been holding her family together on the income earned by her eldest son—$17 a week. The strike put him out of work. In twenty-four hours, according to Mrs. Plante, the children had eaten nothing except a few sweets given them by neighbors.

STATE AID REFUSED.

"I was going to send the five youngest children to the convent school next week but that costs $5 cents a week for each of them, and I haven't any money at all," she said.

With eight children, Mrs. Michael Lamaka is in similar circumstances. She said she has funds for only one more day. Recently the State offered to aid her family, but there were the usual "strings" attached to the offer, and rather than chance the breaking up of her family, Mrs. Lamaka chose to go to work in the mill.

Then came the walk-out and it is too late to accept State aid. Her eldest daughter was also thrown out of work by the strike.

OLD AND YOUNG HIT.

A third widow, Mrs. Dona Blais, has nine children and they have been living on $15 a week earned by her daughter, Loretta. They were facing starvation or the necessity of appealing to charity when the community store was opened.

In the French district conditions seemed worst because the residents were less ready to seek help outside their own immediate circle. One old couple enumerated twenty-one children, many of them grown and married with children of their own, and said the income of the entire group of families had been cut off.

Aged persons and children suffer most from the industrial war.

Mrs. Olive Adams of Pleasant street, Cumberland, mother of eight children, is one of the keenest sufferers. After a two-weeks' ration of little more than rye bread and water, United Textile Workers of America came to her aid. She is keeping the wolf from the door with $5 a week. This sum must feed six mouths.

Mrs. Fred Nanaka, of Cumberland Hill, also a mother of eight, has been living for months on two dollars a week. Her eldest son, former bread-winner of the family, was seriously wounded by bullets fired by State troopers during Tuesday night's rioting.

MAINE MAN DIES AFTER BEING STRUCK BY HORSE

Ellsworth, Me., Sept. 2.—William Crowell, sixty, of Bar Harbor, died today at the Hurley Hospital, this city, from concussion of the brain following an accident on the race track at the Ellsworth fair grounds. Crowell was crowding onto the track to watch the finish of a race when he was struck by a horse. The driver has been exonerated from blame in the accident.

MADEIROS KEPT IN IGNORANCE OF RESPITE

Although Celestino F. Madeiros, condemned murderer, has been granted a respite until October 27, by Governor Fuller, the doomed man has perhaps the only one in Boston today who had not heard the news. He is still in ignorance of the fact that the Governor has given him a new lease of life, according to Warden William Hendry.

The respite was granted because Madeiros may be called as a witness if Sacco and Vanzetti are granted a new trial.

Warden Hendry said he would not tell the prisoner until an official notice came from the Governor.

Madeiros has been in the death house since Friday, and one of the most uncommunicative men ever there, according to Warden Hendry. So far as can be learned, he has never asked questions concerning his chances of gaining a respite. He has received only one visitor, a sister, who came from California and who now is in New Bedford. Prison officials do not know her name.

According to attorneys for Sacco and Vanzetti, Madeiros confessed to the killing of a paymaster and guard during a payroll holdup at South Braintree in 1920. The stay of execution came after the Governor had conferred with Attorney-General Jay R. Benton and Justice Webster Thayer who heard evidence in the Sacco-Vanzetti case.

The Harrisons are guests at the Claridge Hotel, and it is understood they are well known in New York social circles.

Monk to Answer Queries on Auto Insurance

Insurance Commissioner Wesley E. Monk will answer questions concerning the new compulsory liability automobile insurance through the Boston Evening American.

In order that automobile owners may have no difficulty in decoding the new rate schedules, the Boston Evening American announces an "Insurance service."

For instance, if you want to know what is required to protect you on private ways, private property and outside the State, write to the Insurance Editor of the Boston Evening American.

If you have a make of car that turns out several models, and are not sure as to your rate, your problem will be solved for you.

Questions as to the procedure necessary in obtaining registration plates, where to get the blank forms and how to fill them in, will be answered, together with any other queries pertaining to the new rates.

Give your name, the make of your car, the address from where it is registered and its model. If the manufacturer turns out several sizes of machines, as far as possible the inquiries will be answered generally in the columns of the Boston Evening American.

who put their cars up for the Winter.

NO WINTER REFUND.

Under the new law the automatic refund on premiums of cars laid up during the Winter season will be abolished. Hereafter it will be necessary to remove the plates and notify the registry that the car is out of commission, after which the refund may be arranged.

Another hardship they claim will be suffered by business houses with more trucks than drivers, which will have to pay the full rate on each truck, instead of a partial rate on a certain number. The same condition will affect the man who owns two or more cars.

Nevertheless, the insurance men were optimistic over the possibility of a change in the law in the future, and also expressed the opinion their cooperation with the registrar would help to drive undesirable drivers from the roads.

EXPLAINS INSTALLMENTS.

The use of the installment plan in paying for new policies was explained in the office of Insurance Commissioner Wesley E. Monk.

An insurance broker pointed out that a broker as distinguished from an insurance agent can enter into a contract with a car owner for payment in monthly notes, the broker paying the full amount to the company or agent.

Hardly had he completed this explanation when one of the big insurance brokerage firms telephoned it proposed to advertise such a plan tomorrow.

This act will remove a cause of anxiety from the minds of thousands of small car owners, who were faced with the prospect of paying in a lump sum their premiums before obtaining their registration.

The majority of queries received by the insurance commissioner today had to do with this particular phase of the new insurance.

The broker further explained to the commissioner he could be protected in the event of failure of the car owner to complete payments by obtaining a power of attorney at the time the contract was made, which would permit him to cancel the policy.

Commissioner Monk announced that during the week of September 13 he would hold a conference with Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin and representatives of insurance companies with particular regard to the installment proposition.

It was pointed out that an insurance agent is the direct representative of an insurance company and is not permitted to do an installment business with clients but the broker has no such prohibition.

AMERICAN GIVES SERVICE.

In order that puzzled motorists may solve their problems as to rates which apply to their cars under the new schedule, the Boston Evening American has started an "insurance service."

By writing to the Insurance Editor, giving name, make and model of car, and place from where it was registered, the new rate may be obtained. The questions will be answered by Insurance Commissioner Monk, and as far as possible in the columns of the American.

Billy Sunday Has Only Pity for Mrs. Mills

EVANGELIST ASKS: DID GOD THROUGH HIS MERCY SAVE HER?

(The Boston Evening American today presents the third article by the Reverend W. A. Sunday, dealing with the moral lessons contained in the Hall-Mills murder mystery. Writing with the earnestness and forcefulness that have made him famous all over the world, Billy Sunday feels only pity for a misguided, unhappy woman.)

By

W. A. Sunday

"Your iniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden good things from you."—Jeremiah 5:25.

You hear details of that Hall murder mystery, that EPITOME of death and human wickedness, and your thoughts crowd upon you so fast, that you cannot utter them.

You see the miserable unhappy widow, Mrs. Hall, her heart broken. You see the men that are locked in jail, accused of murdering a man and a woman, INSTIGATED BY WHOM?

Your mind goes back to that dreadful scene under the crabapple tree, a man and a woman dead side by side, one or more bullets in each body, one of the two most horrible and unthinkable, a woman, said to have had her throat cut, AFTER SHE WAS DEAD

The Devil Saw Them

The devil saw those bodies and he knew that story long before you read about it in newspapers.

You studied and wept, the devil LAUGHED.

From one end of black hell to the other that story ran. Another sensation of horror added to the long list of human sins, two more souls on their way down to the dark.

"I have surely built thee an house to dwell in a settled place for thee to abide in for ever."

Satan maintains the fires of hell that the wicked may dwell therein.

It is for man to choose. He cannot eat his cake and have it here on earth. He cannot destroy his immortal soul here in the body, and have eternal happiness hereafter.

Of all the beautiful stories that the Bible tells, of all the pictures in the short and suffering life of Jesus, that have drawn tears from the hardest heart, none is more beautiful, more pitiful than that of the woman taken in adultery.

Every human being, able to read or understand language, knows or should know that story.

And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him, and he sat down and taught them.

"And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery, and when they set her in the midst,

"They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act.

"Now Moses in the law commanded us that such should be stoned, but what sayest thou?

"This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

"So when they continued asking among you let him cast the first stone at her.

LIFE STORY OF MISS MILLS

(Editor's note: One night, four years ago, a romance-starved woman slipped quietly out of her home in New Brunswick, N. J., to keep a rendezvous with the man she had learned to love, not wisely but too well. That night the vengeance of her folly overtook her.

Two days later the whole country was startled to learn of the atrocious and mysterious crime which has become known as the Hall-Mills murder. Beneath a crabapple tree in a lonely spot lay the bodies of the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills.

When Mrs. Mills in the feverish haste of love hurried away that night, she left behind her little daughter, Charlotte. "Wait for me, Kid," she said.

She never came back.

COULD CHARLOTTE MILLS HAVE PREVENTED THE MURDER OF HER MOTHER?

That is only one of he startling problems which this sorrowful girl writes about in this absorbing human document.

HUB GIRLS ARE PRETTIEST IN WORLD!

STAGE BEAUTY'S HUSBAND ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

NOTE OF LOVE WRITTEN TO HER

Lotta Cheek Davis, who as Mrs. Selmmon, wife of the physician, won a Boston Evening American "Loviest Girl" contest five years ago. Her actor-husband, H. Tyrell Davis, penned her a hurried love note in New York today, then gulped poison. His life was saved. They both have appeared often in Boston theatres.

HUB STAR'S SPOUSE IS POISONED

H. Tyrell Davis, Husband of a Beauty Winner, Tries Suicide on Broadway

H. Tyrell Davis, well-known actor and husband of the former Lota Cheek Seimmon, prize winner in the Boston Evening American's "Loveliest Girl" contest five years ago, attempted suicide today in New York, according to dispatches from Broadway.

Davis, who is her third husband, took poison, according to the despatches, but quick action saved his life.

After swallowing a quantity of iodine, the actor staggered to the telephone in his apartment at No. 121 West Forty-ninth street and cried for aid.

NOTE TO WIFE.

"I am dying, I am dying," Davis half whispered when the superintendent of the building, aroused from sleep, answered the telephone.

The building superintendent summoned Patrolman Morris Egan, who forced eggs and milk down Davis' throat. Dr. Moyl of Bellevue Hospital arrived later.

A letter written by Davi, to his wife read:

"I didn't want to do it, but I did it. I want you to know you have been all the world to me. I bequeathed all my belongings to you. God bless you."

Davis recently returned from London, where, it was said, he had a role in "Cheating Cheaters."

The prize-winning beauty was married to the actor two years ago in New York while they both were in "Simon Called Peter."

WON $1,000 PRIZE.

Before that she had been married to a man named Sanders—a marriage that proved as unhappy as her first marriage in 1920, when she became the bride of Dr. Lawrence E. Selmmon, Harvard, '15, and a graduate of Johns Hopkins Medical School.

It was when a bride of only five weeks that she won second prize in the Boston Evening American's contest, and a check for $1,000, while she was struggling with him to establish a practice and a rest cure at Portage, Me.

Lota Cheek is a Southern girl and she had met Dr. Selmmon in Alabama while both were engaged in war work in 1917. Then they parted and forgot each other until 1920 when the physician received an emergency call to a hotel in New York.

SMARTEST TOO, ADDS ARTIST

Dario Rappaport, Noted Austrian Painter, Lauds Fair Workers in City

Boston girls lead the world in beauty, style and intelligence, in the opinion of Dario Rappaport, world-renowned artist, whose portraits of Pope Piux XI., Clemenceau, Mussolini and other notables adorn art galleries in America and Europe.

Interviewed today in his suite at the Hotel Westminster, where he is spending a few days, the 33-year-old Austrian told of unattended trips through Boston's stores and streets where he observed through the eyes of an artist feminine Boston.

"I can truly say," Mr. Rappaport declared, "that your Boston girls are leaders of the world in beauty, style and intelligence. I do not necessarily mean society girls. I mean the shopgirls, stenographers and the other girls one meets in the stores and on the streets.

LAUDS CULTURE OF BOSTON.

"I do not think jazz will ever deprive Boston of being the centre of culture. Your Boston Library, Harvard and your many other educational institutions are too firmly rooted ever to be driven out."

Returning to his discussion of Boston and American girls, the artist said: "I think Trudie Ederle did a wonderful thing to swim the Channel, but I do not think any girl should indulge in sports to an excessive degree. A little sport is fine. But too much hardens the muscles and robs a girl of her feminine qualities."

Asked as to his impressions of the Pope, Clemenceau and Mussolini when they posed for him, Mr. Rappaport waxed enthusiastic over all three.

IMPRESSIONS OF POPE.

"The Pope sat for me for six or seven times. I found him to be a kind, gentle soul, calm at all times and very keen. I started to talk to him in Italian, but he preferred to converse in the German tongue.

"As for Mussolini, nothing seemed to excite him. Many times while he was posing we were interrupted by very important messages, but he never changed expression. And, always, he returned to his posing as though he had not a worry on his mind.

"Clemenceau exploded the general belief that he was an old, feeble man. I soon saw why they called him 'The Tiger.' It was the first time, in many, many years, that he had posed for a picture. The fact that I was a former Austrian soldier created considerable comment at the time."

FINAL CURTAIN FOR BEN WELCH

New York, Sept. 2 (I.N.S.)—Ben Welch, the comedian, died today at the Kings Park Sanitarium, Kings Park, L. I. He had been in ill health for five months.

Ben Welch.

Welch had been on the stage for nearly a quarter of a century. Six years ago he became blind but refused to give up his work until recently, when his health began to fail.

He is survived by his widow and a daughter.

Welch, a brother of Joe Welch, famous Jewish comedian, who died several years ago, was stricken blind seven years ago while playing with one of Arthur Hammerstein's productions at Washington. Despite his blindness, Welch continued his work and for the last five years has been a headliner on the Keith vaudeville circuits.

He was born in America and spent most of his life in New York, beginning his stage career while a boy.

Funeral services will be held here Sunday under the auspices of the Jewish Theatrical Guild of America.

GASOLINE CUT TO 21 CENTS

A general reduction in prices of gasoline is expected to follow announcement by Tidewater Oil Sales Corporation today that its retail filling station rate had been cut from 25 to 21 cents a gallon.

The Jersey company declared a reduction to meet the new price. Other companies are expected to follow.

Poor weather conditions in August, a weak market and a combination of other circumstances make a cut judicious at this time, it was said.

Standard Oil reported that no change in prices was contemplated.

'SALLY O'NEILL' TO BE BRIDE

Boston's "Sally O'Neill," Miss Ethel LaPierre, of No. 60 West Newton street, chosen in the Boston Evening American's contest, is engaged to marry Charles G. Snyder, theatrical photographer, of No. 181 Tremont street.

The engagement, which came about directly as a result of the signal honor Miss La Pierre achieved in the American's contest, was a secret until today.

The secret leaked out when Miss La Pierre reported the loss of her $350 engagement ring to police headquarters. She confirmed the engagement herself later.

After Miss La Pierre was adjudged winner in the "Sally O'Neill" contest, she was sent to be photographed by Mr. Snyder. It was a case of love at first sight. Mr. Snyder quickly capitulated to the charm and beauty of "Sally," and their engagement followed after a whirlwind courtship.

Miss La Pierre is nineteen years old and a striking beauty. Her remarkable resemblance to the original Sally made her an easy winner in the American's contest to discover a Boston girl whose appearance most closely matched that of the famous screen star.

The title of "Sally" brought with it a $50 prize in gold, a chance to go on the stage and a wardrobe of modish clothing.

She presented a dainty picture when she made her bow to movie fans at Loew's State Theatre, following the close of the contest. She was given a stirring ovation by the theatre patrons and showered with expensive gifts from Boston merchants.

WARNS N. E. OF FROST TONIGHT

Lowering skies will rob Greater Boston of sunlight for 24 hours longer, according to the local weather man, but he predicts they will disperse without heavy rain.

Cool weather is expected tonight to follow moderate breezes from the northeast, while northern New England has been warned of impending frost.

WOMEN MAY GET RIGHTS IN ARGENTINE

Buenos Aires, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—The Chamber of Deputies has adopted a law giving women the same civil rights as are enjoyed by the men of Argentina. The bill was approved in part by the Senate at the last session of Parliament and this body now will have another opportunity to proclaim itself on the question of equality of sex.

The Chamber also has passed a bill prohibiting bakers to bake at night.

'HELP ME FIND MY DOG, JUNIOR, WON'T YOU'

Robert Rosenblad, six, is shown here whistling for "Junior," the dog that does not come. When Robert, who lives at No. 136 Westwood road, Medford, went vacationing he boarded "Junior" with Carl Swenson, No. 6 Clarke place, Jamaica Plain. The dog strayed and has not been

SHARK SCARES GIRL BATHERS

Nantasket bathers were given a fright today when a creature of the sea, declared to be a shark, was sighted 300 yards offshore at Surfside.

Bathers scrambled hurriedly from the water, two girls became almost hysterical in the surf and a three-year-old boy, John Eastman, Jr., was retrieved from his dip by William Marotto, who went in, fully clothed, after the tot.

Great excitement ranged the length of the beach when the shark was first reported by William Barfield of Philadelphia, who is stopping at the Revere House.

He used glasses on the shark and then Lieut. Daniel McNamara of the Brookline fire department took a peek and declared it to be a shark at least eight feet long.

Anna and Beatrice Nolan of Ware, two of the bathers, became excited when they could not make their way out of the rollers fast enough, but were calmed down after being

GERMANY GIVES U. S. 6 MILLIONS

Washington, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The United States has $5,504,000 cash as its first instalment of German reparations under the Dawes plan.

The funds will be used to satisfy judgments awarded by the American-German Claims Commission.

For that purpose the American government receives 2½ per cent. of the German reparations.

The Treasury expects also to receive $1,000,000 in reparations this year to pay the cost of maintaining the American army on the Rhine.

FRIEND STREET BLAZE THREATENS DISTRICT

Fire, caused by spontaneous combustion, swept rapidly through the five-story plant of the Brooks-Prescher Company, sheet metal workers, at Friend and Union streets, today, and for a time threatened to spread to other buildings.

After a stubborn battle firemen got the blaze under control and confined the damage chiefly to the third floor. Loss was estimated at $1600.

The flames were discovered by a passer-by. The fire started in the basement, but worked quickly upward and spread out on the third

SUNDAY PITIES MRS. MILLS; ASKS IF GOD SAVED HER

"And again he stooped down and wrote on the ground.

"And the, which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

"When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee? Neither do I condemn thee, Go, and sin no more."

The sympathy of the world of course is with the unfortunate woman. Mrs. Hall, widow of the clergyman, murdered while his sin was still upon him. The law accuses Mrs. Hall of murder, and at this moment freed from prison because she was able to give $15,000 bail, she lives under the dreadful accusation of having killed her husband, or instigated his murder, and that of the woman found dead with him.

Millions of men and women, sympathizing with a wife tortured by a husband's infidelity and by jealousy, will hope, pray and believe that this poor woman will be freed of the charges made against her.

The sympathy of millions will go with her, until beyond all "shadow of a doubt," as the law requires, her guilt shall be made clear.

Unhappy Mrs. Mills

Not sympathy, for no Christian heart can sympathize with vile black sin, but pity goes to that poor misguided erring soul, the woman found dead, in her sin, besides the body of the clergyman.

We do not know justice, we do not know right or wrong. It is for us waiting in terror for the stones to crush her body.

"Woman, where are those thine accusers: hath no man condemned thee? Neither do I condemn thee, Go, and sin no more."

TELLS OF THREATS

The Rev. Paul Hamborsky's affidavit telling of alleged threats by Henry Stevens gave the Hall-Mills case a new turn. (I.N.R)

TO OBEY DIVINE ORDERS, AND RECOGNIZE THAT JUSTICE RESIDES IN GOD, AS ALL POWER RESIDES IN HIM.

But in our feeble earthly way we feel pity, for that degraded, unhappy woman.

God, the final judge, will say, what must be done with her spirit. We believe that four years ago, instantly, in the fraction of a second, for time is nothing, God's power that woman faced and knew her fate.

What it was, we cannot know.

Whatever it was, we know that it was ABSOLUTELY JUST.

She was made the victim of one to whom doubtless for years she had looked up to as a perfect character.

She was a young woman, poor, working to take care of her children and of her husband. She sang in the choir of Dr. Hall's church, she met him as part of her duty and of his duty, with the other members of the choir, and others in the congregation on Sunday after Sunday, Day after day.

The two dead bodies will tell the rest of the story.

He tempted the Woman

Every man that knows the world, every woman that knows the weakness of the human heart, will feel pity for the poor woman, Mrs. Mills, scorched and burned by the hellish flame of sin, and pray that she may not now be burning in a fiercer flame in the abode of eternal torment, where "their worm dieth not," and where our suffering lasts through all eternity, a suffering utterly beyond our feeble comprehension.

I say that today Mrs. Mills might be an honored woman in her community, a good mother, a faithful wife, had Dr. Hall remembered the words, "Lead us not into temptation."

There are many men that have said, as Adam did, "She gave me of the tree and I did eat."

There may be some that would excuse Dr. Hall, as they would excuse themselves, by blaming the temptation and sin upon the woman.

But I say that the sin rests first of all upon the man THAT LEADS

I say that Dr. Hall, the clergyman in his robes, speaking from his pulpit, condemning spiritually, looked up to by the woman that no sin may have taken to hell with him, is the man responsible.

I say that he has no hope here, hereafter, or in hell, except in God's mercy. But the miserable woman has the pity of those that know how weak is human nature, HOW POWERFUL IS TEMPTATION.

This is the third of a series of articles that the Reverend William A. Sunday will write to emphasize for our readers the moral lessons in this great, strange mystery of jealousy and revenge.

ties to political allies or superiors of officials of the city of Boston. The most direct way, it seems to me, of determining whether these complaints are founded on fact, is to examine such parts of your clients' books as relate to expenditures made by them."

Attorney Damon E. Hall's reply said:

"Of course you were not present at the conference referred to. What Mr. Alpert really said was that he should not expect the books of a corporation to show improper or illigal expenditures and that such expenditures would naturally be concealed under purchases of supplies and materials."

A Finance Commission report, dated May 10, 1922, and submitted to the then Mayor, discussed "The award of contracts to Warren Brothers Company."

This report pointed out that during the year of 1921 eight contracts were awarded for Warrenbitulithic to the Warren Brothers Company, which was not the lowest bidder, and asserts that this action cost the city $32,592.25 more than it would have had the lowest bids been accepted. The report went on to say that in the opinion of the Finance Commission, the city thus obtained pavements much inferior to those which would have been obtained had the lowest bids been accepted.

The report also stated that the commission was informed that many of the streets paved by Warren Brothers Company were paved with a new type of pavement, Warrenbitulithic, although specifications called for the old type.

After quoting costs to contractor and city for this type of pavement, the report states that on this basis "it is obvious that the prices paid by the city for bituminous sheet pavements have been exorbitant."

CHARLOTTE MILLS TELLS OF DAYS THAT WERE HAPPY

and misery a girl of 20 can know.

And yet, except when I am alone, I manage somehow to go along and do things, and talk to people, and even smile and enjoy little pleasures like going to a theatre with my girl friend.

The hard hours come when I am alone in my room with the leaky roof in the house on Carman Street, the ugly little house where I lived so long—my mother and father, my brother Dan and I—and where I last saw my mother that night four years ago when she went out and said, "Wait for me, Kid till I come back."

I cry then, I am sometimes wondering if I could have kept any thing from happening if I had waited because she did come back to get her scarf—and went out again—and I never saw her again.

HAPPY DREAMS

I am writing this with the feeling that although I don't know how to express myself or really write as you might call it writing, perhaps I can set down some little things out of my life and my mother's life that will put her in a true light to people who didn't know her as I knew her.

From a baby I simply adored my mother. Almost the first thing I can remember at all must have been when I was three and a half and my mother had me by the hand, looking for rooms.

We moved in April. I was then four years old. Just sixteen years ago. Mother told me many years later that it was at that time she was discouraged and felt tied down and hemmed in and her marriage had been a terrible blunder.

The whole trouble was that my mother had an education and realized that people were put on this earth for better things—not just mere existence. She had a different kind of mentality than my father. She had ambition and ideals and dreams.

She loved to work and to learn things. If she ever came across a word in reading, or when anybody was talking, that she did not know the meaning of, she would never rest till she had dug it out.

LOVED HOUSEWORK

How she used to work! She was always up at seven or before, and by 8:30 she had the rooms all to rights and the ammonia water on the woodwork and every little tassel on the curtains and drapes laid even. She loved housework.

Well, I was telling how my mother had me by the hand, looking for rooms. I remember we turned down Carman street and she saw a sign and we went in the basement door at No. 49 to ask. There was a nice woman who lived downstairs with a family of grown-up children, and she showed us the rooms upstairs, and my mother said:

"Well, I guess it's the best we can do. I'll try to make them nice." And she did and said I'd help her. They both laughed at me.

It wasn't a comfortable house, but mother made it comfortable and attractive, but now the home isn't attractive and it isn't comfortable because mother isn't there. Things have gone to pieces—things that mother loved.

My father put in gas-pipes himself. There isn't any plumbing in the house, only cold water, and no bathroom at all: it's just like the country. In Winter we have coal stoves.

When the roof leaked mother used to keep after the landlady until she fixed it, but now there seems to be no one to get things fixed and the roof leaks and the paper in our living room is all rotted.

Mother used to hate to have things out of order.

Even in the house we lived in before we came to Carman street, when I was almost a baby, Mother was always trying to fix things up. I don't see how I can remember as far back as that, but I distinctly recall hearing her say one day in that positive way she had:

"Well, I'm discontented and disgusted! If the landlord doesn't make those repairs, I simply won't pay the rent and if there's any fuss we'll move and that's all there is to it!"

KIND NEIGHBORS

That made an impression on me, baby as I was. I crept downstairs to where the landlady lived. She had always been very nice to me and used to take me in her arms and pet and love me. When she reached for me this time, I pulled away, looking as cross as two sticks. She spoke to me, and I turned my face from her.

"Why, Baby, whatever's the matter with you? Don't you love me anymore, Sharlie?"

"No, I snapped, with my nose five inches in the air, "and we're going to move out and sting you a month's rent for not fixing the pipes."

She laughed, but she went right upstairs to Mother and asked what it was all about—said she didn't want us to move, and wasn't she (and could get the notice things weren't going to be fixed and any body was going to be "stung" for rent?

It ended in a friendly talk and she promised to repair the pipes. Mother said afterwards:

"You were a naughty baby all right—but I guess it hadn't been for you, we never would have got the pipes fixed.

So I though I was pretty smart.

I guess it was over a year after that when we came to the Carman street house where we still live. After a little while my brother was born.

I was four then. I used to run in to see the people next door—the Smith blind people. I always called them Aunt Mil and Uncle Gus because I heard the folks in the downstairs part of our house call them that; they were relations of theirs, and very nice, too, and made a great pet of me, so of course I loved them.

They were Aunt Mil's nieces and nephews. The girls used to save me candies and pieces of cake and their poor friends would bring me little presents. I remember a ring and a necklace and bracelet. Oh, how I loved and treasured them.

(In tomorrow's absorbing chapter of "My Story," Charlotte Mills gives a vivid picture of her mother and describes Mrs. Mills' longing, her groping for better things. She relates the advice her mother gave her about marriage—advice distilled from the boiling turmoil of her own depressing life. Miss Mills also tells how the Rev. Mr. Hall used to leave his fine mansion to come to see little cookies her mother had prepared for him in her own drab home.)

PLAIN CLOTHES

Mother never had any jewelry, but I often heard her say she didn't care for it—it "didn't suit her." She always wore the plainest things. Always tailored suits that she made herself, and plain velour hats; and a certain kind of oxford ties with broad ribbons in them and low heels.

She had very small feet and sometimes later on, when I was old enough to think about such things, I used to wonder how Mother would look in pretty, high-heeled shoes and silk stockings and fluffy clothes. I didn't remember ever in my life seeing her dressed up. Even her Summer dresses were straight and plain.

For a while after Dan was born, mother was quiet and depressed and Father was crazy about Dan from the first. He was a good baby and mother used to look at him sometimes as if she was thinking hard. Then she'd snatch him up and hug him and make a great fuss over him.

Sometimes I thought she loved him more than she did me, but she said no, it was only that she loved more and when he was born than when I was, and she wanted to do the best she could to keep up with her not wanting him.

In spite for her love for Danny, and her watchfulness, he was always in some trouble. He had so many accidents, falls and burns. One very bad one when he stumbled into a boiler of hot water and was terribly scalded. Mother said it tragically and seemed sadder than ever after that. She used to say it seemed "like punishment."

Young as I was, I used to try to figure out why mother had so little happiness, and just what was the matter, and I used to pray for her at night and ask God to somehow make mother happy and give her some joy in life."

WU IN FLIGHT; CANTONESE TROOPS ENTER WUCHANG

Shanghai, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—The Tobo News Agency reports from Hankow that a portion of the Cantonese troops broke through the northern defenses at Chiai Ansihih and entered the city of Wuchang, and that Wu Pei-Fu, ruler of China's central provinces in person, in command of the northern troops, is retreating to Hankow. Earlier reports said he had been wounded.

Many Russian officers are said to be leading the southern army. The Cantonese government is forcing its troops not to molest any missions.

Peking, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—It is reported from Harbin, Manchuria, that the Chinese flag was raised today over the steamship department of Manchuria following a long dispute between General Chang Eso-Lin with the Russian Soviets over ownership of river steamers.

HALL PROSECUTOR'S VISIT TO STEVENS' HOME A MYSTERY

Somerville, N. J., Sept. 2 (I.N.S.).—Convinced that he has found a "hole of some importance" in the alibi of Henry Stevens, the latest member of the family of Mrs. Frances Stevens to be questioned in connection with the Hall-Mills murder mystery, Special Prosecutor Simpson today planned to question him further.

Stevens' alibi that he was fishing near his home at Lavalette, N. J., the night of the murders, has been substantiated by twenty-three willnesses. Lavalette is fifty miles away from New Brunswick, where the Rev. Edward H. Hall and his choir-singer sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, were shot to death on the night of September 14, 1922.

Simpson would not reveal the nature of the alleged discrepancy he claims to have found in the alibi, but he did not hesitate to say that he attached significance to it.

MISTAKEN IN DATE.

The prosecutor has indicated his belief that Stevens' friends, who are ready to swear he was far away from the murder spot on the night in question, might have been mistaken as to the exact date.

Stevens has built up his alibi of four years ago, and cites an entry in his diary as proof that he was fishing on the night of the murders. He encountered the assertion of investigators that his automobile had been run 150 miles on that night by declaring that the car had never been equipped with a speedometer.

Lieutenant Walter Giechuch of the Jersey police returned yesterday from Cleveland, where he had been sent to follow up a "clew." His trip had been fruitless, he said.

MRS. HALL'S DIARY.

Portions of Mrs. Hall's diary were made public today. In it she says:

"Mr. Hall had no private enemies. I can form no conjecture as to the motive of the deed or the perpetrators. Our life together has been absolutely happy and sympathetic. My confidence in him is unbounded and unshaken."

THREE CONVICTED IN $300,000 WAR FRAUD

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—A sealed verdict, opened in Federal Court today, revealed the conviction of three men in a $300,000 war fraud.

The convicted men are Captain Benjamin F. Falter, former chief of the textile branch of the surplus property division of the war department; Herman H. Cantor and Bertrand Weiss. Abraham I. Levy, who was also named in the indictment, was found not guilty.

MAGICIAN LIFTS SPIRITS' VEIL IN EXPOSE

HOUDINI EXPOSES SLATE-WRITING IN ATTACK ON FAKE MEDIUMS

(Houdini, "man of mystery," magician and reproducer of spiritual latic phenomena, today begins a startling expose of the host of fraudulent mediums, clairvoyants, crystal gazers and fortune tellers preying on the credulous in this city. His expose takes the form of a series of articles, of which the following is the first.)

By HOUDINI
(Reproduction Prohibited Without Permission)

Fraudulent mediums are far more dangerous than the public believes. Millions of dollars are obtained fraudulently from the public of this city and throughout the world each year. I wish it understood I am not attacking the religion of spiritualism, but simply exposing fraudulent mediums, fortune tellers, crystal gazers, etc.

I would not believe a fraudulent medium under oath. They are in the most doubted profession in the world. I make this statement without any qualification. Fraudulent mediums rob the rich, the poor, the halt, the blind, the widows, orphans and children.

I have never stated that there is no such thing as spiritualistic manifestations. I contend that communication with the dead, if possible, never has been proved.

Spiritualists claim they can speak to the dead. So can I. But they do not answer me.

A head of spiritualists in Los Angeles was sent to jail for sixty days. A newspaper man, in two weeks, for $160, was ordained a minister, received his papers and credentials, and was granted the right to open a church and to marry and bury people. This in spite of the fact that he had told that he had been a criminal and wanted to rob people.

It is not necessary to go to Europe and point out men like Sir William Crooks, who, I believe, was hoodwinked by Katy King.

human credulity.

I have a record of two score instances where properties aggregating at least $1,000,000 in value changed hands into the possession of mediums.

One noted medium now in New York, known as "Bright Eyes", is as clever a medium as one could wish to meet, and even at present she states that the spirits use her vocal chords.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, while on his two visits here, I believe was hoodwinked from New York to San Francisco and back again. He is sincere, but deluded. He has written me several times "that it is ridiculous for me to go searching for an honest medium when I possess the power myself."

The great mediums of America today, Dr. F. L. O. Keller of Lilly Dale and Washington, Mrs. Laura B. Pruden of Cincinnati, Miss Ada Besonet of Toledo, all produce what they term "writing on slate."

I would gladly pay any medium in the world the sum of $10,000 if he or she will simply put the sign of the cross on the slate that I present, and have so challenged the medium so-named to undergo the test.

Every spiritualistic pastor, every medium, is against me for no other reason than that I am showing the impossibility of any one being able to read a message sealed with an envelope. We were born all to be equal. No one possesses supernatural power.

(Read tomorrow's Boston Evening American for further exposures of how the fraud mediums cheat and rob the public.)

—Boston Evening American staff photos.

SUBJECT IS SHOWN SLATES
In his expose, Houdini shows his subject two clean slates on which the "spirit" will write answers to the question. The slates are bound together by a rubber band and the girl holds them over her head.

HOUDINI "INVOKES" THE SPIRIT
Behind the girl is a fake door with a moveable panel. Houdini's aide, standing behind the door, writes the answers on a second set of slates and slips them through the sliding panel.

EITHER BAFFLED OR CREDULOUS
When the slates are unbound, of course, they reveal chalk. The subject of the seance if baffled, or if credulous, attributes it to a spirit hand.

FRENCH AIRMEN MAKE RECORD

Paris, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Lieutenant Challes and Captain Weiser, French airmen, have established what is claimed to be a new world's non-stop long distance flying record.

The Air Ministry has received a telegram from the aviators announcing that they have landed at Bender Abbas, on the Persian Gulf, a distance of 5,200 kilometers. The old record was 4,754 kilometers, made by Captain Girier and Lieutenant Dordilly last month from Paris to Omsk, Siberia.

Challes and Weiser started from Le Bourget airdrome Tuesday morning.

The distance covered by Challes and Weiser, about 3,230 miles, is exactly the distance from Brest to New York.

The brief telegram received from the aviators announcing their arrival was filed at 3:39 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Assuming that they landed at 1 o'clock, their flying time for the jump would be just 27 hours and 20 minutes.

BIG LEAD HELD BY SHORTRIDGE

San Francisco, Sept. 2 (I.N.S.).—With most precincts heard from, the renomination of Senator Samuel M. Shortridge was assured today. He was leading his nearest opponent, Judge Robert Clarke, of Los Angeles, by almost 200,000 votes.

The lead of Lieut.-Gov. C. C. Young, candidate for the Republican nomination for the governorship, was gradually diminished, but he still has a lead over Gov. Friend W. Richardson of almost 12,000.

John F. Elliott, McAdoo candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, is believed a winner over Isadore B. Dockweiler, championed by the faction led by former Senator James Phelan. Elliott is leading by about 20,000 votes.

The race between Justus Wardell, the anti-McAdoo candidate for the nomination for governor on the Democratic ticket, and Carl Alexander Johnson, was still extremely close.

Burton Fitts of Los Angeles had apparently won the nomination for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Leslie Buswell Is Promoting Musicale at Stillington Hall This Evening

HAVING TRIUMPHED DRAMATICALLY with the recently formed Stillington Players at Stillington Hall, Leslie Buswell now proceeds to successfully stage a musicale of superattraction for the North Shore's delectation.

RUMORS FROM STILLINGTON forecast a crowded house for this evening's Efrem Zimbalist-Charles Naggie concert, such an outpouring of smart folk as delights Mr. Buswell and his co-workers. An artistically executed S. R. O. sign surely will have to be added to Stillington's other picturesque possessions.

MRS. JOSEPH LEITER brings a party of ten to Stillington, after a dinner party at Edgewater House, the magnificent North Shore Summer home of these popular cosmopolites.

SIR ESME HOWARD, British Ambassador to these United States, is an honor guest; His Eminence the Cardinal also is bidden to lend refulgence to the scene, and scores of North Shore people will be there.

MESDAMES WILLIAM H. COOLIDGE, both senior and junior; Bayard Warren, George von L. Meyer, Russell Sturgis Codman, Isaac T. Mann, M. Greene Slaughton, William H. Moore, Francis P. Sears, Edgar R. Champlin, George Lee, Bryce Allan, Charles Boyden and Gardiner M. Lane bring parties.

A PIATT ANDREW brings a group of guests, and in the audience will be Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman and Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane, about whose charming heads are still resounding congratulatory words for their personal triumphs as Stillington Players.

ON THE SIDELINES at Longwood Miss Isabella Mumford is wearing her trim rig of white with Breton blue reefer and handeau, as she watches intercollegiate sailing contests for national laurels. Miss Mumford herself is playing in mixed doubles, as she did a few days ago in Newport.

WEDNESDAY AT LONGWOOD was brilliant, with sky and sunshine at their brightest and a packed gallery. Tennis stars of first magnitude and ambassadorial guests shared honors, and kept the crowd dashing hither and yon as the centre of interest shifted.

MISS ALICE STUART, owner of a string of thoroughbred horses, takes her pets to Newport to gather in blue ribbons at the Horse Show which is society's diversion tomorrow, Friday, and Saturday.

NEWPORT'S HORSE SHOW is firstly a horse show and secondly a fashion show, for feminine Newport lays in a fresh stock of fripperies for the annual event and masculine Newport, always sartorially elegant, follows a close second as a pleasing picture.

MRS. FREDERIC CAMERON CHURCH, JR., backing Vanderbilt family tradition, is showing the famous stallion, Fortitude, once a Reginald Vanderbilt horse and recently purchased by the charming Mrs. Church.

ALL NEWPORT will be there. Box holders of imposing and social significance are numerous, such as Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, Mrs. George Peabody Wetmore, Mr. Lewis Cass Ledyard, Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Mrs. Prescott Lawrence and Miss Martha Codman.

MUSSOLINI HONORS U. S. MEN WHO RESCUED CREW

Rome, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini conversed at length this morning with Captain Paul C. Greening, of the American steamer President Harding, whose crew after a 36-hour fight in the Atlantic Ocean last October saved the crew of the Italian freight steamer Ignazio Florio. The Premier paid tribute to the heroism of the American commander and crew.

80 SPANIARDS DIE IN STORM

Barcelona, Sept. 2 (I.N.S.).—More than 80 have been killed and 161 injured in storms, floods and torrential rains in Spain.

The damage to property and crops is estimated at 60,000,000 pesetas.

Twenty were killed when a washout near the village of Tortosa caused the smashup of a passenger train.

The village of Santa Aulivio is under water. A carbide factory in the village, when flooded with water, exploded causing the death of three persons and the injury of ten others.

Eight persons were killed in Barcelona when two houses collapsed.

ALFONSO ELEVATES CRITIC OF DE RIVERA

Madrid, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—General Damaso Berenguer, former Spanish High Commissioner in Morocco, who was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in 1924 for attending a banquet at which speeches attacking General Primo de Rivera's dictatorship were delivered, has been appointed head of King Alfonso's military household.

General Berenguer was commander-in-chief of the Spanish forces in Morocco in 1921 when the Moroccan tribesman badly defeated the Spanish troops at Melilla. He was tried for negligence because of the disaster, but was acquitted.

EXPECT ARREST IN GLOUCESTER DEATH

Gloucester, Sept. 2.—Developments in the investigation of the circumstances surrounding the death of Mrs. Edward Jelmberg, Rockport bride of 10 months, may lead to the arrest of one or more persons within the next 24 hours, authorities in charge, of the probe declare.

Two men and a woman alleged to have some knowledge of the operation performed on the girl, which Medical Examiner Philip R. Moore has reported was a contributory cause of death, was questioned at

RUSSIA AND AFGHANISTAN SIGN NEUTRALITY TREATY

Moscow, Sept. 2(A.P.).—A neutrality pact between Russia and Afghanistan has been signed. The treaty stipulates that each country shall remain neutral in the event of a conflict with a third power and provides for non-interference in the internal and foreign affairs of one country by the other.

It is further provided that neither country shall allow on its soil an unfriendly element of its own nationals or of any other power to engage in anything detrimental to either power.

MAN IN TOMBS FINDS HE IS "BADLY WANTED"

New York, Sept. 2 (I.N.S.).—Edward Sullivan, 34, had a laugh on the police here.

Sullivan, locked up in the tombs since May, discovered he was listed on a police circular as one of 14 "desperately wanted men."

He had the laugh on the authorities but he didn't laugh much. He was wanted originally on a murder charge but that was dismissed and he is now accused of carrying a revolver.

SENATOR CAMERON WILL DEMAND COPPER TARIFF

Washington, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Senator Cameron, Republican, Arizona, declared just before he left for his home that he would work for a revision of the tariff at the next session.

He said that he was interested particularly in obtaining a duty on copper and long staple Sea Island cotton, now on the free list. Producers of these commodities in Arizona, he added, are unable to meet foreign competition and need tariff protection.

NEW PARLEY ON OCEAN FLIGHT

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Efforts were renewed today to end the dispute over the personnel for the non-stop New York to Paris flight, of which Captain Rene Fonck, French ace, is the designated leader.

A previous conference having failed to bring about an agreement, representatives of the Argonauts, Inc., backers of the proposed transAtlantic flight, hoped to bring Captain Fonck and Captain Homer D. Berry, U. S. A., together at a meeting today.

Captain Fonck has steadfastly refused to consider Captain Berry for membership in his crew, terming him an outsider and declaring that his captaincy was granted by the Mexican general, Pancho Villa, when he was in service in the latter's army.

Captain Fonck declared the American officer held only a second lieutenant's commission in the reserve flying corps of the United States Army. Captain Berry's flying time, on the other hand, is twice that of the Frenchman.

FAIL TO REMOVE CATHOLIC CHAPLAINS

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—A move to oust Catholic chaplains from the army has been defeated in the Chamber of Deputies by the Conservative Radical combination. The movement to discharge the chaplains dates back to the adoption of the Constitution in 1925, under which Church and State were separated.

There was considerable debate in the Chamber before the resolution of ouster was defeated.

SMITH TOO ILL TO EAT "FARM DINNER"

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 2 (I.N.S.).—Governor "Al" Smith is ill, but not seriously.

His was forced to take to his bed at the Onondaga Hotel and to cancel his engagements for a "farm dinner" given to agricultural leaders of the State who are here attending the State Fair.

His illness is largely due to his inability to get away from official duties for complete recuperation after an operation performed in New York a week ago.

BRIMFIELD'S 'OIL GUSHERS' FAIL TO SPOUT FORTUNES

West Brimfield, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Dreams of easy millions from oil gushers in West Brimfield, which resulted from reports of the discovery of oil at a depth of 14 feet while sinking a well for a water supply for the Boston & Albany railroad, were dissipated today when it was found that the supposed oil was only seepage from an area that had been more or less saturated with leakage from an old oil container.

But the percentage of oil, though small, was enough to compel the abandoning of the well as a water supply, and the 14-foot cut was refilled, closing the hole in the ground, the hopes of the dreamers and the [illegible]

LIST HUNDREDS IN 'PARKING' ROUNDUP

Will Face Court September 22; Many More Autos Are Tagged Today

Once more today the special detail of police slipped about the city nipping illegal parkers for the growing list of drivers who will tell it to the judge in traffic court beginning September 22.

Two hundred or more numbers were jotted down and tags were dealt out in the first day of the September anti-parking drive.

It will be several days, however, according to Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, before the few slipups to the parking places, or otherwise "knocked off" through error, can be weeded out.

On Sept. 22 the first "draft" to court will be made by summons, and by that time it is expected that the list of prospective guests in court will have tripled in length at least.

Just as yesterday, the effect of the drive was noticeable today and the curbstones were clearer than for many months. The parkers had either dropped their cars somewhere in the outskirts or had placed them in garages—if they could find them anywhere downtown.

The special "hunting squad" on roving commission circulated through the business district with pad and paper and some tags for the most part today, but some went into the farther sections where many parkers, believing the downtown work to be still absorbing, were taken by surprise.

The sixteen-year-old son of Ormon Doty, the President's guide, gave his father and the other boys distinguished pupil a lesson in fishing when he caught a sixteen-pounder. Lieut. Richard L. President Coolidge's largest catch to date weighed but six pounds.

HUB HELP FOR STATLER HOTEL

Employes of the new Statler Hotel, between 1200 and 1500 in number, will be recruited in Boston as far as possible, E. M. Statler announced today.

The famous hotel man, accompanied by W. S. Wagner of George B. Post Sons, New York, and Louis Roriner, of Roriner & Brooks, Cleveland, came to Boston to look over the work on the new hotel and office building. Mr. Wagner is in charge of the designing of the buildings and Mr. Roriner of decorations and furnishings. The three are guests of the Copley Plaza during their stay, which is to end tonight.

Mr. Statler said the work was progressing, according to schedule and the hotel would be opened about the first of the year. It is understood the office building will be ready for occupancy shortly.

Mr. Statler said he hopes to obtain all his employes in this city, although that may not be possible in the case of trained executives.

ERCOLIN, a liquid, is used most effectively with eye cup for the eyes and nasal douche for nose and throat. Any method, however, which insures ERCOLIN reaching the affected membranes is effective. ERCOLIN instantly neutralizes the irritation caused by the protein which is found in all pollens.

A Preventive

ERCOLIN not only breaks up Hay Fever attacks but prevents their recurrence. Using ERCOLIN each morning and evening, neutralizes all protein that lodges in the mucous membranes and prevents Hay Fever from getting started.

On Your Vacation

Do not put off Hay Fever protection until just before leaving town. Go to the nearest drug store today and ask for ERCOLIN. Use it freely—it is harmless in every way—guaranteed to contain no narcotics or habit-forming drugs. If you are unable to obtain ERCOLIN in your neighborhood, write the Smith-Ernster Laboratories, Cambridge, Mass., giving the name of your nearest drug store. Geo. Wm. STORES OPEN ON SATURDAY

As evidence that the Summer season is virtually ended and it is now time to settle down to the stern realities of business, all the department stores will be open all day Saturday for the first time in two months.

The Retail Trade Board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce issued announcement of the opening to eliminate the doubt existing in many minds whether the stores would be idle this Saturday because of the holiday on Monday following.

56,614 European Tourists Visit U.S. in Year

Washington, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—European tourist travel to the United States is showing marked increase, W. W. Husband, acting Secretary of Labor, discovered today in checking immigration service returns.

During the fiscal year ending June 30 last the immigration service allowed 56,614 aliens to enter the United States on pleasure or business mission, for a temporary period. The previous year showed such admissions only to a total of 35,324.

200 POISONED AT PICNIC

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Veal loaf was blamed today for the illness of nearly 200 persons stricken with ptomaine poisoning after the annual picnic of the city Christian Endeavor societies.

A half-dozen of the cases were as serious as to prohibit the removal of patients from their homes to hospitals, and physicians despaired of the lives of two girls.

Two clergymen were among the sufferers.

"Stranger" Went Far but Not Far Enough

An unidentified man can do his bit in crime checking if he will communicate with Captain Mellevitt of the Bay street station, the police captain said today in asking newspapers to aid in his search.

The stranger is the man who said he caught the registration number of the automobile driven away by the thug who robbed Miss Ethel Kenworthy of an $1,150 payroll last Friday, almost in front of her place of employment, the Cronin Plumbing Supplies Co., No. 91 Charles street.

RUM MEN BURN FOE TO CRISP

Chicago, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Believed to have been tortured to death with fired gasoline and a rope, the body of a man was found in a field near Chicago Heights today. Police attributed the killing to a bootleg war that has claimed seven lives in the district.

A rope was around the neck and the clothing had been nearly burned off the body, which was so charred as to make identification difficult. Police said gasoline had been poured on the man's clothes.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS IN ILLINOIS STORMS

Galesburg, Ill., Sept. 2 (I.N.S.).—With several thousand persons homeless and property damage estimated at more than $2,500,000, Central Illinois began today to repair the damage wrought by a series of the worst torrential storms to sweep this section in years.

Galesburg and Peoria were the hardest hit. In these two cities approximately 3,000 people are homeless. Most of them were cared for last night by relatives and friends. Many others were quartered in public buildings and emergency dormitories.

LOVE AND DREAMS OF RUDY'S HEART AND SOUL POURED OUT IN SHEIK'S OWN LILTING VERSE

Into the innermost recesses of his soul the public is for the first time permitted to gaze and know the real Rudolph Valentino.

His poems contained in the little volume of "Day Dreams" reveal him as a man with a great depth of feeling and of finer sensibilities. As he scorned the prosaic in his wonderful film acting, so likewise he abandoned the beaten path of poetic rushes. He wrote as he felt, revealing a passion hitherto unsuspected.

Deep sentiment and moving emotions are in the verses printed today in the second instalment of this wonderful book of "Day Dreams."

EXTRAVAGANZA

Extravagance! The very word is ruler. BEAUTY, vulgarity is necessary to development, for even a weed growing in a swamp can sometimes be cultivated into a hot house plant. Take an orchid not under its own surroundings, but dress it by putting it in a proper receptable, and what a difference! But, outside of beauty, what have you? If we could only combine the beauty of an orchid with the soul of a weed we would get an improvement in the orchid, for real weeds are graceful enough to spring up between cobblestones even to be trampled upon.

Rather be a blade of grass that knows the heartbeats of Mother Earth than the potted plant which is pampered and restored only to a semblance of life.

DAY DREAMS
(To the Friend)

Yesterday—In contemplation
We dreamed of love to be,
And in the dreaming
Wove a tapestry of Love.
Today—We dream our dream awake;
Realization
Coloring our Romance
With all the glory
Of a flaming Rose.
Tomorrow—What awakening lies before us;
Our tapestry
Ill sheds, perchance,
Or mellowed—glorified
By love's reflection?
I wonder——

SUSPICION

There crossed the path
Of my dream of you
A gossamer web of gray,
So soft its sheen,
Almost unseen,
But it stopped me
On my way.
Like a cold, gray granite battlement
It walled me all about,
For a cruel steel
Was in the feel
Of the silken web of doubt.

DOMINO

Passion's cloak,
As ashy thing to wear,
Covering the shroud of love
That once was fair.
What gruesome imagery
Does this convey to me,
Grim death—itself no ghastlier a thing than this Could ever be.

HEART FLOWER

O lovely rose
Within whose chalice lies
The heart of my true love,
Did not the gods in benediction stoop
To bless life from above?
And place within thy rosette L.,
The rubies counterpart.
I found it there,
A jewel rare,
The flower of thy heart.

MIRAGE

Happiness you wait for us
Just beyond,
Just beyond.

We know not where,
Nor how we shall find you.
We only know you are Waiting, waiting,
Just beyond.

MOROS PRAISE GEN. WOOD

Cota Bato, Island of Mindanao, P. I., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Tributes were paid to Governor-General Leonard Wood by influential Moro citizens when Carmi A. Thompson visited here, as a part of his survey undertaken for President Coolidge.

Datu Piang, who was once the most powerful chief in Moroland, said the Moros desired to retain American rule. He declared the confidence of the Moro in the United States grew out of the administration in Moro Provinces by General Wood. He asserted the Moros would be more satisfied if General Wood had the authority to remove Christian Filipino officials.

As a token of their respect for President Coolidge, the Moro leaders presented Colonel Thompson with a collection of Moro knives, used to decapitate enemies before American occupation.

Colonel Thompson paid especial attention to rubber growing in Cota Bato Province.

BOTH SIDES FIRM AS MEXICAN CONGRESS SITS

Mexico City, Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Coincident with the opening of Congress, to which the Catholic episcopate is appealing in an admittedly forlorn hope for modification of the regulations for enforcing the religious clauses of the constitution, both President Calles and the episcopate again have reiterated the unalterableness of their respective positions.

Each again has charged the other with responsibility for the situat on which has caused the cessation of worship with priests presiding in churches throughout the country and an economic boycott which admittedly is hurting trade.

Valentino's Story of His Life

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Born and brought up in Italy, Valentino was graduated from the Royal Academy of Agriculture with the idea of becoming a landscape gardener. Lack of funds forced him to abandon an ambition to attend the naval academy. Tired of life in a little town, he ran away to Paris and Monte Carlo and returned home a prodigal. His family then sent him to America. Here he learned to dance, discovered he must earn some money, went to work for a landscape gardener, lost a few jobs and finally landed in Central Park as a truck driver, where he slept all night. Seeking a waiter's position, he became a dancer. After a tour of cabarets and vaudeville, he joined a musical comedy company and reached California. After many efforts he gets a chance before the camera, and he gets a real part. Then followed other interesting engagements. Also the "Sheik" met and married Jean Acker. She soon left him. "The Sheik," however, on the screen went from leading engagement to leading engagement.

CHAPTER II—HIS SECOND WEDDING.

(Reprinted from Photoplay Magazine by permission of James R. Quirk, the editor. Copyright by Photoplay Publishing Company.)

"The Four Horsemen" was the turning point in my luck, for it not only brough me screen success but also a great deal of happiness.

While engaged upon it I met Natacha Rambova. She wa. then designing the "sets" and the costumes for Madame Nasimova, who at that time was planning to produce Pierre Louys' "Aphrodite."

Miss Rambova interested me the first time I noticed her about the studio. She never looked to right or left. She seemed frozen like a piece of ice. However, it was not a matter of love at first sight. I merely thought her a very attractive type of girl, with a distinction that marked her from all the rest of the studio people.

MEETS RAMBOVA

I didn't meet her until I was working in "Uncharted Seas." It was then that Madame Nasimova called me over to speak about the part of Armand in "Camille." Natacha was on the "set" and I was introduced. We chatted together for a few moments, but still she preserved that distant, cold manner that I had noted about her at first.

Just as we were finishing "Uncharted Seas" there was a masked ball at the Ambassador Hotel. I intended to go in the costume that I wore during the Argentine dance scene of "The Four Horsemen." I invited Natacha to go with me. The ball started at nine and ended at eleven, a typical Hollywood affair.

Of course, we arrived just as "Home Sweet Home" was in order. A friend of ours, a Russian doctor, was giving a party on that evening, and he suggested that we come to his house. So a party of us accepted, and it was there that Natacha and I first danced together.

At last the ice was broken, and I was strangely happy over the fact. I didn't feel I had made any great hit, but she was no longer as glacial.

Then in "Camille" she offered to fix my hair for the first part, when I looked like a country boy. And she used to help me in other ways as I was playing Armand. Little by little we became friends. During the course of the picture we spent a great many evenings together, riding, walking or reading together.

We became tremendously attached to one another. It wasn't love at first sight. It wasn't any dashing, romantic adventure. Just a sound, wonderful friendship, that grew out of our loneliness.

We found we were interested in the same things, in literature, in music and in art. She had been almost a recluse, and so had I. Out of this slow-growing sympathy and understanding came a real, enduring love—the kind of love that is the greatest thing in the world.

The life story of Valentino, as published by Photoplay Magazine, ended here. The balance of his life, from 1923 to 1926, was as follows.

Some time before the Sheik met Natacha Rambova, an interlocutory decree of divorce had been granted to Jean Acker. Possibly because he was not fully acquainted with laws of the United States, he married Miss Rambova before Miss Acker obtained her final decree.

The wedding took place across the Mexican Border at Tia Juana. Miss Rambova in private life was Winifred Hudnut, step-daughter of Richard Hudnut, millionaire manufacturer of perfumes. She was also known on the stage as Winifred De Wolf and Winifred Shaughnessy.

Valentino returned to California with his bride to learn that he faced a charge of bigamy. Miss Acker's divorce, he was told, would not be co.. lete until a year had elapsed.

CASE IS DROPPED

Given a preliminary hearing on the bigamy charge, Valentino was discharged by a grand jury, which refused to take any action. The case was then dropped. Valentino countered by re-marrying Miss Rambova at Crown Point, Ind., after the final decree had been awarded to his first wife.

Miss Rambova and the film star had differences, with the result that she went to Paris and obtained a divorce in 1926. Just before the decree was granted she said in an article written for the Hearst newspapers that home and husband are the greatest career a woman can have.

"This may sound strange," she said, "coming from me, since Mr. Valentino's press agent, seeking to arouse sympathy for him, accused me of refusing to have children and branding me as a woman who put her career first. Of course, I hold my career first, and that is the career I dream of—to be a wife and mother."

THEN POLA

Hardly had Miss Rambova been granted her divorce than rumors began of impending marriage between Valentino and Pola Negri. Miss Negri finally settled discussion by announcing a "trial betrothal" to Valentino, saying she would marry him at the end of a four-month test if their love remained the same.

Time passed, but Valentino and Pola did not marry. It was generally accepted, however, that they would cement the union in the near future.

At the time of her announcement, Miss Negri said—"This is my great love affair. I am so eager to test it by separation—The supreme test."

A month before the "Sheik" became ill an editorial appeared in the Chicago Tribune entitled "Pink Powder Puffs." Valentino resented imputation that he was the cause of American men using face powder and issued a challenge to the writer of the editorial. When the editorial writer would not reveal himself, Valentino said he considered the silence vindication.

Besides his better known successes, Valentino appeared on the screen in "Passions Playground," "The Wonderful Chance," "Moran of the Lady Letty," "The Young Rajah," "Frivolous Wives," "A Rogues Romance," "Monsieur Beaucaire," and "A Sainted Devil."

In 1924 he evinced activity in another sphere, publishing a book of verse called "Day Dreams." The poems were described as "Jig-Saw verses on love, passion, kisses and kindred topics."

Some of Valentino's pictures were great money makers. "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is said to have earned more than $2,000,000. Valentino always insisted that "The Sheik" was his idea of a poor performance.

(The End.)

RESOLU"E'S MAST NOW IS LAWN FLAGSTAFF

Newport, R. I., Sept. 2 (I.N.S.)—The hollow steel mast of the Resolute, primarily instrumental in the win of the American cup defender over Thomas Lipton's Shamrock, will no longer support the sail of a ship at sea. It has been dismantled and is being erected on the lawn of the estate of Henry Waters, prominent yachtsman here, as a peppy reminder of the ship's great victory.

It will be used as a flagstaff. Walters, who is a Summer resident, comes from Baltimore.

RUDY'S BODY ON WAY TONIGHT

But it is understood that there is something else back of the New York trip, one of whose purposes was to meet Valentino's brother, who arrived from Italy, and persuade him to allow the screen idol's body to be buried in America, land of his adoption.

To a representative of this newspaper, Seminara stated last week that he was going to New York. He went and then he hurriedly summoned Attorney Feeney and Medical Examiner Leary of the Southern District.

They arrived in New York today, a few hours before Valentino's body was to leave for the West and Hollywood, where Valentino's fame was born and grewv.

Valentino's Body on Its Way West Tonight

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—The body of Rudolph Valentino will be on the way to Hollywood tonight for burial in the capital of filmdom.

Plans of the screen sheik's friends to inter him where he won his fame were approved by his brother, Alberto Guglielmi, who arrived on the Duke Rimeric.

Guglielmi was met at the pier by Pola Negri, who kissed him three times, then burst into tears.

Mr. Guglielmi said he thought his brother and Miss Negri were engaged, but Rudolph "did not tell me everything about it."

"Certainly they loved each other very much," he added.

Mr. Guglielmi was taken to the funeral parlors and gazed on his brother's features for about fifteen minutes.

A month's mind mass in Valentino's memory will be sung here when Mr. Guglielmi returns from Hollywood.

CARDINAL GETS JEWELRY BACK

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—With the exception of two small diamond rings all the jewelry and bonds, valued at approximately $60,000, which were stolen from the residence of Cardinal Dougherty, archbishop of Philadelphia, Tuesday night, have been recovered.

The police are holding Lester Price, twenty-one, of New York, whom authorities say has confessed the robbery, and Michael Novack, twenty-three, of Washington, D. C. Price is charged with breaking and entering and robbery while Novack was being held for further questioning.

Among the jewelry stolen was the Cardinal's episcopal ring, itself valued at nearly $5,000. Another was a ring once owned by the late Archbishop Prendergast and valued at $5,000.

LIGHTS DIMMED FOR BATTLE

Managua, Nic., Sept. 2 (A.P.)—Some of the beacons in the lighthouses of Nicaragua's coast have been extinguished for military reasons. An attack is expected momentarily on El Bluff.

There are no hospital facilities near Coseguina and neither the government nor the revolutionary forces have adequate medical equipment.

The revolutionists in their retreat after being defeated in the battle are reported to have been cut off from their base of communication. A number of machine guns and rifles and a quantity of provisions were captured by the government troops.

The revolutionary general, Samuel Sedalia, Andjulian Vanegas, and Colonel Torres are reported to have been killed in the engagement. Colonel Marcos Potoame, who commanded the government forces, was raised to the rank of general on the battlefield.

Fur Coat Protection

THE WOMAN who has saved for a year or more to buy a fur coat wants real value for her savings. She is entitled to an honest deal and dollar for dollar value.

IN the interests of seeing to it that those women who buy a dyed coney coat are getting full value for their money, and are buying with a knowledge based on truthful information, we, as the dyers of the famous NORTHERN SEAL, our registered trade mark for selected seal dyed Australian and New Zealand Buck Coney skins, are running this advertisement.

NORTHERN SEAL is the winter fur of the Australian and the New Zealand Buck Coney or Hare. The NORTHERN SEAL dye applied to these skins produces a rich, lustrous seal black fur that makes a wonderfully handsome and serviceable coat.

FOR YOUR protection, insist that the dealer open the lining and show you the name "NORTHERN SEAL" stamped on the back of every skin. This assures you of the utmost in seal dyed fur coat values. Further, insist that the retailer assure you in writing that the coat is made of Buck Coneys. Reliably made coats of Buck Coney skins range from $90.00 to $250.00, according to size and trim.

GILDA GIVES HER DIET HINTS

(This is the second of a series of articles written for this paper by Gilda Gray, who comes to the Metropolitan Theatre on Saturday in person, on the stage, with a company of 22 and in her first screen venture, "Aloma of the South Seas.")

MY SECRETS OF CHARM
By Gilda Gray
HEALTH vs. DIET.

"Nobody loves a fat man" is true, in a measure, so far as womankind is concerned. At least, no woman likes her own reflection in the mirror when it has taken on rotound lines. How many times do you hear the phrase, "I just can't reduce, no matter what I do."

That isn't quite true. With few exceptions, most of us can lose as many pounds as we choose if we have the will to carry on. I am not a dietician but I can say from personal experience that most women will lose weight quicker by relinquishing potatoes, cream, bread, sugar and all other sweets than by trying the many "reducing salts" and other get-thin-quick methods on the market. Green and succulent vegetables and fruits are not only good for the would-be-thins but for those affected with bad skins.

(Watch tomorrow's Boston Evening American for another Gilda Gray article.)

TWO INSPECTORS HEAR COLLISION EVIDENCE

Captain Herman T. Parker and O. G. Haines, inspectors of steam vessels at this port, have taken all testimony in connection with the recent collision between the Coast Guard patrol boat 130 and a tow of coal barges, reserving decision until a later date.

The collision occurred Aug. 6, off Boston Light, when the 130 ran between two barges in tow of the seagoing tug Fame. The Fame was towing the barges Marie C. Beasley, Irene and Edith from Norfolk. The tug and barges escaped injury but the patrol was damaged considerably.

ELOPED, WILL REJOIN FAMILY

Methuen, Sept. 2.—Within a few days John M. Laing, former town auditor who vanished simultaneously with the disappearance of Miss Merle Dow, will return to his wife and family, according to a letter from him received by friends here.

Laing was located in a western city, but the whereabouts of Miss Dow have never been learned. In his letter the former auditor made no mention of the girl. At the time of his disappearance Laing wrote to his brother and said he would never return and would never be found. He said he had no choice and must do as he was doing.

GASOLINE PRODUCTION EXCEEDS BILLION MARK

The domestic demand passed the billion gallon mark for the first time, the daily average being 779,400 barrels.

Stocks on hand at the end of the month totaled 99,315,000 barrels, a decrease of approximately 2,500,000 barrels.

TAGGART PLANS TO SUE; CALLED A GAMBLER

Indiana Political Leader Resents Being Called "Gambler" in Novel

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—Tom Taggart, Democratic leader of Indiana, has threatened a $100,000 suit against Doubleday, Page & Company, publishers of Edna Ferber's latest novel, "Show Boat," unless three paragraphs alleged to contain references to himself as a professional gambler are deleted, the New York World says today.

It is said that more than 235,000 copies of this novel, Miss Ferber's twelfth, have been sold already. Her last novel "So Big" was awarded the Pulitzer prize as the best American novel of 1925, and was a best seller for 24 months.

The former United States Senator and owner of French Lick Springs has demanded, says the World, that three paragraphs on Page 308, mentioning "Tom Taggart, "West Baden," and "Roulette" be removed from all unsold copies in the hands of book dealers and from future editions.

The offending matter was printed in the August number of the Woman's Home Companion, but there is no mention of a threat against the Crowell Publishing Company, the magazine's publishers.

The World says reports of the suit were confirmed by Mr Taggart, Tom Taggart, Jr., and Fred Van Nuys, of the Indianapolis law firm of Ralston, Gates, Lairy and Van Nuys.

CANADIAN NATIONAL WILL REDEEM GRAND TRUNK

London, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—Terms of settlement of prolonged litigation between the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway four per cent. debenture stockholders and the Canadian National Railways have been made public.

By these terms the Canadian National shall issue debenture stock as from July 1, 1926, carrying annual interest of two per cent. the first interest payment to be made on or about January 1, 1927. Provision is made for a sinking fund, equal to two per cent. of the total amount of stock issued. Stockholders are invited to send in sealed tenders of their stock for redemption. Drawings are set for the last week in May, 1927.

Born in Newry, Ireland, he was ordained in Liverpool, England, in 1848. Soon afterward he came to America, filling many pastorates during his half century of active service.

GERMAN MAGNATE HERE TO ACCUSE DAUGHERTY

New York, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—Richard Merton, German metals magnate, has arrived in New York to testify against former Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty and former Alien Property Custodian Thomas W. Miller, charged with accepting a $391,000 bribe to release $7,000,000 of seized metals stock to Merton, the New York World says today.

The paper declares that Merton's arrival was unknown to anyone but government officials, who wanted him here in time for the opening of the trial in Federal Court Tuesday.

CURRAN FLAYS 'TRAITORS' IN PARTY RANKS

Candidate for Sheriff Charges Rival "Bartered" for Votes Last Fall

"The tremendous ovation given me at the Boston Opera House by more than 4,000 Democrats clearly demonstrates that the people of Suffolk County have decided to repudiate every man responsible for the Democratic calamity at the last municipal election," declared Councilor George E. Curran, candidate for the Democratic nomination for sheriff of Suffolk County, at rallies in South Boston.

"My opponent cannot erase from the public's memory his treasonable bartering during that campaign. He has refused to deny that he is being supported by the same Republican leaders in this contest that he traded with last Fall.

"I have placed his entire political record, one that shows his consistent Republican tendencies despite the fact that he was elected as a Democrat, before the people and they have given me their answer.

"Suffolk County will be redeemed for the Democratic Party. And when the Democrats of the county have shown that they will not tolerate traitors in the party, 'stalking horses' for Republican candidates will be a thing of the past."

$20 BILL BOY FOUND NOW BELONGS TO HIM

The saying that virtue is it own reward and it's well it is for it gets no other, was originally uttered by a cynic with a distorted view of life, according to Je- searold Sidney Cohen of No 141 Woodrow Avenue, Dorches- ter.

Sidney Cohen.

You couldn't recognize Sidney Cohen as the boy who found a $20 bill and returned it to the owner, after he received only a reward of $1 and a promise that he would be remembered in the will. The boy found the amount last month and promptly turned it over to the police. The bill was not claimed and Captain James J. Watkins of the Mattapan station turned it over to Sidney, who is now looking at automobiles with intent to purchase.

KELIHER RAPS CURRAN AS 'TRAITOR'

Charges Opponent Aided Nichols to Win Mayoralty Fight in Ward 9

Sheriff John A. Keliher turned the spotlight on the last mayoralty campaign and challenged his opponent, George A. Curran, for the Democratic nomination for sheriff to explain "Who slaughtered Teddy in Ward 9."

The charge of treachery was made by the sheriff in connection with the defeat of Theodore Glynn in Ward 9 when he went down before Malcolm E. Nichols by six hundred votes.

Keliher spoke in Charlestown, Roxbury and Neponset.

District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien was moved to defend himself from the attacks of William J. Foley, an opponent, for the Democratic nomination for district attorney. The noted case of George W. Colley was taken as an issue and the district attorney defended his course in charging that Foley's counsel was Foley's office associate or partner.

Foley continued his attacks on O'Brien in rallies in Neponset North Dorchester, Meeting House Hill and Peabody Square.

William C. Pruit began today an intensive campaign for the Democratic nomination as district attorney with rallies in Hyde Park Readville, Dorchester, Neponset, Mount Hope and Mattapan.

FIGHT OVER U. S. WORLD COURT RESERVATION

British Move at Geneva to Suspend Debate Opposed by Other Nations

Geneva, Sept. 2 (U N S)—The fifth reservation, proposed by the United States as a condition to its entry to the World Court, today provide a difficult pill to swallow for the representatives of fifty-seven powers, signatory to the World Court, in conference here.

Representatives of France, Belgium and Italy attacked the reservation, declaring the United States is seeking a privileged position.

The Belgian delegation suggested that the World Court be asked to decide whether unanimity or a majority is required to accept the United States reservations.

Hurst suggested that it would be better not to ask the court for an opinion on this matter now, but to let the question remain obscure for the time being, at the same time giving the United States assurances that it would have all of the privileges before the World Court that would be given to a member of the League Council. No more and no less.

M. Fromageot, French delegate, objected to the proposal of Sir Cecil Hurst's to be left to the future.

"I think it is never wise to leave anything obscure," he said.

The reservation objected to is as follows:

"That the Court shall not render any advisory opinion except publicly after due notice to all States adhering to the court and to all interested states and after public hearings or opportunity for hearing given to any State concerned, nor shall it without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest.

Geneva, Sept. 2 (A P.)—Dr. Momtchilo Ninchitch, foreign minister of Jugoslavia, is slated for the presidency of the assembly of the League of Nations when it begins its sessions tomorrow. The temporary chairman will be Dr. Edvard Benes, foreign minister of Czechoslovakia.

Paris, Sept. 2 (A P.)—The Havas News Agency's correspondent at Geneva still attaches importance to the failure of Viscount Ishii to get the decision of the Council regarding the demand for a permanent court head.

Jock Hamill, at a dance with Molly, who is in love with him, becomes cool. He is tired of her. She's too easy to kiss, he thinks. Molly goes home. Jock meets Yvonne Mountford. He falls in love with her at sight. Most beautiful girl he ever saw, is his verdict.

Jock is charmed when Yvonne refuses him a kiss. She gives him her address.

Mrs. Hamill, wise woman, picks from Jock his meeting with Yvonne. Jock is entertained by Yvonne. Jock returns to college.

Jock, at lunch with Yvonne, sees an imposing looking business man seat himself at the next table. Yvonne leaves him and talks with the man for some time. She makes no explanation when she returns.

Brad Hathaway asks Jock to take Eunice, his wife, to the football game. He doesn't like to, but agrees.

Yvonne cannot come to the football game. Brad asks him to take Eunice.

Bones Allen tells Jock what the college is saying of Eunice and he. Jock tells Yvonne he loves her.

CHAPTER X.

Five minutes of three.

The railroad station houses a gathering strictly stag. The platform groans with the tramp and stamp of young masculine impatience, and is animate with trousers as wide as bolster-cases. Hundreds of boys are there, college age, recognizable anywhere by their clothes, and the tilt of their hats, and their just-tubbed look, and their air of insouciance and irresponsibility and "what-the-hell-do-we-care now." One senses light hearts and heavy hip pockets.

Three o'clock.

There is a crackling electric tension in the air—then a cheer, and a general surge toward the platform's edge. The locomotive blows its warm quick breath against their faces, crashes past, stops. Strings of girls begin to sniff from every coach. Magazine cover girls, these. Lovely laughing girls in furry coats and bright hats and wee ridiculous slippers. Blonde girls and dark, tall girls and tiny, all shapely and delicately tinted and sweet with perfume. Each poses an instant on the train steps, to look and be looked at . . . then becomes a part of the crowd, and . . . ies, and grows breathless, and cries at last, "Oh there you are!" . . . and is hailed happily, and seized, and borne away.

From, glittering pageant of a glittering age, has begun.

"And how's Molly?"

"Oh, fine, Jock, and so glad to be here!"

The roadster was parked at the rear of the station. Jock assisted Molly to it and into it, stowed away her luggage, then slid in himself over the side and slouched down beside her. "We'll have to wait a

'Fatted Calf' Killed Ready for Errant Husband

HER FACE PRETTY, HE ASSERTS

But Harry Doesn't Intend to Wed Forrest, Fawn Gray or Evelyn

Chicago, Sept 2.—Harry K. Thaw will not marry Evelyn Nesbit again. He will not marry Fawn Gray. He will not marry Forrest Hope Walter, but all that doesn't mean he will not take another jump into the marital seas, he said.

He came to Chicago on business in connection with his new book which details his life history. It is called "The Traitor." He was accompanied by his attorney, W. C. Barnesburg.

His book is named, he said, after a New York attorney, who attempted to blacken the character of Evelyn Nesbit, the then young girl Stanford White betrayed and in consequence was shot by Thaw.

Since Thaw obtained his freedom he has been mentioned prominently as the companion of some of Broadway's brighter lights.

"As for Fawn Gray," he asserted. "I saw her three weeks ago at Atlantic City. I didn't speak to her, but the next day I saw that she had said that I had given a breakfast for her.

"I have never seen Miss Walter, who came all the way from California to marry me. She sent me her photograph and I sent her $20,000. It was a pretty face. Then she decided to come east.

"I have no intentions of marrying either of these girls, nor remarrying Evelyn—(he pronounces it Evevlyn)—but that doesn't mean that I shall never marry again."

"Although I could give you scores of names of pretty girls, I shall only mention one. There is a young girl in New York named Laura Lee. She is 18 years old. She started on the stage when she was 11. Not a single person has ever attacked her, not even by false kindness, and she is very, very pretty. Thirty years ago she would not have had a chance on earth.

"I know her and correspond with her. However, our friendship is of no concern now. I don't think there is the faintest chance of my marrying her, or she marrying me."

Miss Lee was formerly connected with Earl Carroll's Vanities. She later became a night club entertainer.

METHUEN ROMANCE TO SOON END HAPPILY

Methuen, Sept. 2.—The home of Mrs. John M. Laing, wife of the former town auditor, was swept and garnished today, the fatted calf was killed and a light was placed in a window, for the errant husband was coming home like the Prodigal Son.

Laing, who electrified the community last June when he disappeared at the same time as Miss Merle Dow, daughter of State Representative and Mrs. Robert Dow of Parker street, has been located and is expected home today or tomorrow.

Mrs. Laing declared everything would be forgiven if her husband would return and he has taken her at her word. As far as could be learned Laing returns alone, for nothing was said about Miss Dow.

Mrs. Dow had not heard of Laing's expected return. The very tone of her voice [illegible] indicated [illegible] she asked immediately:

"Is my daug[illegible]g, too?"

Told there was [illegible] information to [illegible] this effect the mother made no comment. But she said, in answer to questions, that she and Mr. Dow longed for their daughter to return, that she could come right back to the home she left and everything would be all right.

The possibility of prosecution of Laing was suggested. But Mrs. Dow said: "Neither I nor Mr. Dow have any wish to prosecute him. All we want is for our daughter to come home."

Laing was one of the most popular men in town. He had served with the headquarters company of the 101st Field Artillery and was member of the Methuen Civic and Board of Trade. He held office in a hotel

MOSES WILL RUN BETTER, SAY LEADERS

Believe Senator This Year Will Poll More Votes Than Last Time

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 2—Eight of ten Republican leaders in New Hampshire's only seaport were agreed today that in next Tuesday's primary United States Senator George H. Moses will better the 1,451 to 673 vote by which he was successful here six years ago.

The total Republican vote cast in the State-wide Republican primary of 1920 was 53,240. Of these Moses received 34,236 and his opponent 18,984.

Portsmouth Republicans who attended the ladies' day outing of the Rockingham County Republican Club at Hampton Beach believe, they say, that the Bass candidacy came to an end at the banquet table, so far as this end of the State is concerned. They declare the spirited response of Senator Moses to the comments made upon his "record" in his presence by former Governor Bass solidified the already strong Rockingham County sentiment for Moses and brought new recruits to the Senator's standard.

NEVER A "REBELLAH."

In Portsmouth, where the former Governor's activities in Bull Moose days are not forgotten, it is held that Bass has never been a "regular." One of his complaints against Moses is that many years ago the senator was opposed to woman suffrage, an issue that which, Republican "regulars" say, is a dead as King Tut.

Mr. Bass also cried at the banquet, the Portsmouth men say, because Moses voted with the other Eastern Senators against the McNary-Haugen price fixing bill, for the relief of the grain growers of the West. The McNary-Haugen bill did not propose to fix the price of a single product of the farms of New Hampshire.

HOPKINS EXPLAINS.

President Hopkins of Dartmouth College, who has come out for Bass of Harvard against Moses of Dartmouth, explains that it is because of the latter's opposition to American membership in the League of Nations and the World Court.

Moses was graduated from Dartmouth in 1902; Hopkins, in 1901. President Hopkins is President of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation of America, Inc.

Leaders of the Moses campaign in this city can find nothing in the present situation to worry about. The usual stories are afloat of "under ground currents" of the probable effect of a "whispering" campaign, and so on and so forth, but the Hopkins organization is going straight ahead with plans to pile up a record Moses vote.

In the last primary, Moses carried Concord 2,200 to 1,003, Manchester, 4,826 to 2,430; Nashua, 1,833 to 804; Keene, 1,167 to 784, Dover, 1,461 to 656.

On Election Day, the figures were Moses, Rep., 80,173; Stevens, Dem., 64,935.

"$30 MURDERERS" WILL DIE IN CHAIR TONIGHT

Columbus, O., Sept. 2 (A.P.)—"Some time tonight," the electric chair at the Ohio penitentiary will fall into line in expiation of the "$30 murders" of Dorothea Ch... of her or... unless Governor V... Donahey intervenes.

The life law execution for the murder of James McCumber, sixty-five, who "knew too much" about the bootlegging activities of John Bryant, forty-negro, one of the condemned men. They received $30 between them for the crime.

A. M. E. CHURCHES OF NEW ENGLAND CONFER

Bridgeport, Ct., Sept. 2 (A.P.)—Representatives of A. M. E. churches in twenty New England cities have gathered here for a three-day conference which will continue today and tomorrow. The pastor, 4 lay delegates and Sunday school members are present from each church in the district.

Samuel H. Giles, Narragansett Pier, R. I., was named secretary at the opening session and Rev. H. H. Jones presiding elder of the Newport district, delivered the annual address.

DUELIST PRINCE AND RIVAL FACE ARREST IN MEXICO

Mexico City, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—The Federal prosecutor has summoned for examination Prince Xavier Pignatelli of Italy, a descendant of Cortez, the Liberator, and Emilio Medo, a wealthy Mexican, who fought a bloodless duel recently in the State of Morelos. The records of the duelists are to have been summoned.

It is believed the investigation may lead to the arrest of all four as dueling is against the law.

And to do this it is immediately concerned in making Florida a better place in which to live and do business.

This particular Chamber is one of the live functioning units of its country. It is actively on the job every minute, supplying information ... p. emotional schemes routing out those which are unsound and organizing an education committee to build up the school system.

VERMONT REAL GOLF COURSE

The real golfer, like the real fisherman, goes where the course is packed with variety, with interest and only a sporting chance of a normally low count.

So he goes to Vermont, because Vermont landscape is the most beautiful landscape in America. And like Scotland, the birthplace of Golf, the Green Mountain State is a country built for Golf.

The rolling, plunging, sea-like character of the natural setting is apparent also in the hill and plains of the courses themselves. The wealth everywhere of hills, terraces, ravines, lakes and streams is composed into courses with traps, bunkers and such turf on green and fairway as can be grown only in this fertile State.

And the Vermonter is a poet. His highways have all the charms of by-ways. Like the swoop of a swallow, or the climb and plunge of a plane. Winding paths through a labyrinth, loitering streams, some mountain altar, or buttresses that push into the valleys

BURLINGTON 76 YEARS SERVING

The great Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad is seventy-six years in existence today. In 1850 the first diminutive engine puffed its way... tally along the line road between Aurora and Turner Junction in Illinois.

The total rolling stock consisted of the "iron-kettle" engine, one coach and two freight cars; and the road itself was but twelve miles long.

The twelve miles of track in 1850 have become 11,500 miles. One transportation system weighs an empire of thirteen States. The little "iron-kettle" engine has been replaced by 2,700 powerful locomotives; 80,000 freight cars bear the produce of the Middle West to the other States.

Nineteen million people travel over the line in a year, and 30,000 persons are on the payrolls.

The Burlington prides itself on carrying more live stock than any other railroad. Its system is the largest food distributor in the world and carries more grain than any other.

It claims to have the most perfect travel service and to hold the world's "on time" record.

RETURNS TO HIS HOTEL POST

A. R. Caldwell, who on September 1 took over the management of the Hotel Braemore on Commonwealth avenue, is one of the best known and most popular of New England hotel managers.

Born in Somerville, educated in Cambridge and Boston, and for a time employed by the Cambridge Trust Company, and in business with his father, he entered the hotel business by opening and operating the Hotel Braemore, on May 1, 1917. Upon the consolidation of the Braemore and Kenmore Hotels, Mr. Caldwell took over the management of both. Later the Hotel Wadsworth, all of which he managed until 1923, when he went to the Copley Plaza, and from there to the Alden Park Manor, which he opened and managed until April 1 of this year.

From there he went to the Atlantis—a Summer hotel at Kennebunkport, remaining there for the season, preparing, in the meantime, to take over the Braemore.

This hotel is being completely renovated and redecorated and furnished with many added facilities for the convenience and improvement of service. It consists of 105 non housekeeping suites, with bath and reception hall

NEW MOTOR ROUTE OPENS

Today, Sept. 2, the B. & W. Lines are inaugurating a new motor coach service between Boston and Framingham. This fleet of coaches will be operated over what is known as the Air Line route

Coaches will leave the Boston terminal, at No. 12 Park square, for Framingham hourly, from 7:15 a. m. to 7:15 p. m., returning from Framingham hourly, from 6:50 a. m. to 6:50 p. m.

These coaches are to take the place of the trolleys which now leave Boston at this hour and will follow the present trolley air route via Boylston street, Huntington avenue, Brookline Village, Chestnut Hill, Newton Highlands, Wellesley Hills square, North Natick and Framingham. Connection by electric cars will also be maintained throughout the day and evening.

The schedule of the trolleys to Worcester, however, remain unchanged.

This new coach route is expected to render 100 per cent. service to people living in the area now served by the B. & W. Lines.

BROOKHART IN NEW ATTACK

Washington, Ia., Sept. 2 (A.P.)—A recent statement by former Secretary of Agriculture E. T. Meredith, charging that Colonel Smith W. Brookhart had been guilty of misrepresentations concerning a meeting of the Federal Reserve Board in 1920 brought a rejoinder from the Republican senatorial nominee today.

Speaking at the Dutch Creek Fair, Brookhart declared agriculture had been deflated six times as much in proportion as other business.

He charged that "this gigantic discrimination against agriculture is due to the secret proceedings at the Federal Reserve Board. He advised corn and the Class A directors of the Federal Reserve Bank and either to the incompetence of the Secretary of Agriculture in his failure to protect farmers against this calamity or to his alliance with the Wall street crowd."

"This conclusion," he said, "is challenged by E. T. Meredith, who was then secretary of agriculture. Meredith was not at the meeting that deflated the farmers. I have never said he was in that meeting, but he was secretary of agriculture. It was his duty to know what was the meeting so vitally affecting all of agriculture, and to protect the farmers from the calamities it planned."

Brookhart has been recognized as head of the ticket in Iowa, and Colonel Frank L. Smith, senatorial nominee in Illinois, will receive speaking assignment support from the Republican Senate Campaign Committee. This was announced at the opening western headquarters in Chicago

Promoters Make Plans for Suzanne's Tour

Paris, Sept. 2 (I.N.S.).—Suzanne Lenglen will sail for the United States on the Leviathan September 21 to make arrangements for her professional tennis tour of the country, it was announced today.

Definite arrangements for the Boston appearance of Suzanne Lenglen, French queen of tennis, are being made today. Before nightfall the exact dates of her Boston engagement will be made public.

Bill Pickens, representing C. C. Pyle, the Champagne, Ill., promoter, who has Suzanne signed to a contract calling for a series of matches in America, was in conference with Bob McKirdy, promoter, and George Brown, of the Boston Arena, today in reference to the matches.

McKirdy will have charge of all arrangements made for the French queen in New England. Brown, manager of the Boston Arena, where the matches will be staged, stated that he saw no obstacles in the path of Suzanne's matches in the big Boylston street auditorium. It was said unofficially that Lenglen would play here either on October 15 or October 16 following matches in New York and Philadelphia.

HARD SCHEDULE FOR BOSTON SOCCERITES

By BILL MALLEY.

THE Boston pro soccer eleven will essay the Iron Man stunt this week-end, playing three games in three successive days against the strongest clubs in the American League circuit. All three games are away from home and the players will have to travel each day, which is quite an undertaking considering that the league opens up Sept. 11.

On Saturday the Blue and Gold will travel to New Bedford, where they meet the Whalers at Battery Park in an exhibition game. The following day they will be stacked up against their greatest rival, Fall River, at Tiverton, which means another long journey, and on Monday, Labor Day, they will play Springfield in that city.

The game in Springfield will mark the first time that major league soccer has been attempted there.

BOSTON fans will be disappointed to learn that the Woodsies are playing away from home both Saturday and Monday, as they were looking forward to seeing their favorites in action on at least one of these days. It was impossible for the management to clinch a home game so the fans will either have to travel or go without.

THE Blue and Gold already have met Fall River and Springfield playing a tie game with the former and defeating the latter, but this will be their first meeting with New Bedford and the fans are anxious to know how they will fare against the Whalers. The latter team have an army of stars which includes six major league players from the other side, Honeyman, Stewart, Gibson and Snell, Hutchison and Chedgoy as well as Andy Stevens, leading goal scorer last year, and Harold Brittain ex-manager of Fall River.

Of the two games Boston has played they have looked good and with Jock McArthur, Dave Priestly, Johnny Ballantyne, Alex McNabb, Bobby Blair and Whitey Fleming all in the lineup it would not surprise us if they went through this trio of games without a defeat.

RACE TIGHTENS FOR TWILIGHT LEAGUERS

With the opening game of the Twilight League "world series" scheduled for Labor Day there isn't a sport devotee in New England who can name the contestants in the titular frolic.

It won't be long before this dispute is settled, but the race is so close now that the "Twi" moguls are beginning to worry over the situation.

Tonight there are three games which will have considerable bearing on the outcome of the race. Whether or not Fore River has a chance to surpass Lynn on the pedestal will be known definitely by tomorrow.

Lynn meets South Boston at the Christopher J. Lee Playground in Southie, Bid Patterson's Fore River charges hope the Peninsula District outfit is victorious, as it will help them dethrone the Lynnites. A half game will separate them from the leadership if the Danick nine is successful.

Dorchester clashes with Malden at the Pearl Street Stadium. With a reformed club, Manager Coughlin a tribe hopes to strengthen its grip on third place. Lefty Shea, the only unbeaten hurler in the Mooney household, will face the Dorchester batsmen.

Somerville and Waltham, with the cellar championship at stake, collide at the Watch City.

Fights Last Night

Philadelphia—Benny Bass, Philadelphia, beat Babe Herman, California (10); Lew Tendler, Philadelphia, defeated Joe Mendler, Trenton, N. J. (10); Pete Sarmiento, Philadelphia, won from Eddie Anderson, Wyoming (10).

Oakland, Cal.—Young Johnny Burns of Oakland defeated Jimmy Moore, Cincinnati middleweight, (10).

Los Angeles—Paul De Hart, Compton, Cal., featherweight, beat Jack Silvey (10).

Dinsmore Joins Hub Pros

Brad Dinsmore, Princeton's great quarterback, will call signals for the Boston pro football eleven this Fall. Dinsmore accepted terms today and will report for training to Coach Herb Treat in mid-September.

Bill Cronin, burly fullback of the Boston College eleven for the past three years and captain of last year's team, has signed a contract and will hold down the fullback berth for the Hub aggregation.

TUNNEY TAKES UP TRAINING ROUTINE

Stroudsburg, Pa., Sept. 2 (A.P.).—Most of the population of Stroudsburg was astir early today to catch a daylight glimpse of the city's newest citizen, Gene Tunney.

The challenger for the heavyweight championship slipped in between rains. The streets were lined with cheering folks in spite of the late hour.

Tunney's rousing welcome here completed a day of triumph for him, regardless of the outcome of his bout with Jack Dempsey he has had his day in which he was cheered to the proverbial echo in three cities, Rochester, N. Y., Philadelphia and Stroudsburg, Pa.

The challenger settled at once into his new environment. He found the ring ready for his daily boxing lessons and there was no lack of sparring partners for brisk road work.

The challenger had to take time out in acknowledging the welcome to tell a number of inquirers how to pronounce his name. There has been a disposition to sound the first syllable as if it were spelled "two." The bearer of the name told his new friends that he prefers a pronunciation in which the "Tun" is sounded as though it were 2,000 pounds of coal.

Irish-American Club to Hold Bout

The Irish-American A. C., prominent in amateur athletics during the Fall and Winter, will conduct a series of regular amateur boxing tournaments at the Boston Arena.

The first tournament will be held at the Arena Sept. 10. Boxing in the 112, 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and heavyweight divisions will be held.

VIERKOETTER JEOPARDIZES HIS SIMON PURE STATUS

Berlin, Sept. 2 (A.P.)—The reported acceptance by Ernst Vierkoetter, champion Channel swimmer, of challenges from Gertrude Ederle and Mrs. Clemington Corson has raised the question of his amateur status. Walter Binner, technical umpire for the German Schwimmverband, today telegraphed the Berlin bureau of the Associated Press from Breslau

"If Vierkoetter competes with Miss Ederle and Mrs. Corson for money prizes, he loses his amateur status. The matches might possibly be approved by the Schwimmverband in case Vierkoetter applied for permission and promised strictly to observe the amateur regulations, namely, not to swim for money."

HOLYOKE HIGH TO USE FALCO FIELD SATURDAYS

Holyoke, Sept. 2.—The Falco field the only unclosed athletic plant in this city will be available for high school football teams to use Saturdays. It is believed that Holyoke High will play all their home games this year on Saturdays instead of during the week as in past years.

The hot tip, incidentally, was an also ran.

BEN LEVIAS of the Boston Swimming Association looks askance at the ambition of May Elwell, Revere's swimming prodigy, and Delna Carlstrom, the Worcester mermaid, to swim the English Channel. FRANK DANE RELEASED PENDING HIS APPEAL

Washington, Sept. 2.—Frank Dane Boston sporting promoter, under a sentence of three years for illegal promotion of bouts in Washington, was this afternoon released from the district jail, pending adjudication of his appeal.

Dane was convicted of violating the laws regarding prize fighting in the district, in staging a series of bouts at the Arcade under the auspices of the National Capital Athletic Club. He filed notice of appeal, through his attorney, Wilton J. Lambert, but Justice Stafford of the District Supreme Court, twice refused to grant him bail pending action on the appeal motion.

Later a member of Lambert's office went to Massachusetts and successfully argued with a justice of the Appeals Court for the release of Dane on nominal surety. Sentenced was found and Dane was freed this afternoon, after serving several months of his term.

RAIN TRIUMPHS OVER TENNIS PLAYERS

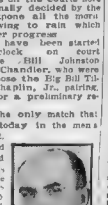
By GEORGE GRIMM

Longwood Bowl, Chestnut Hill, Sept. 2.—After the participants in the national doubles tournament had taken their place on the courts here today, it was finally decided by the officials to postpone all the matches owing to rain which prevented further progress.

Play was to have been started at 10:30 o'clock on court No. 1, while Bill Johnston and Edward G. Chandler, who were scheduled to oppose the Big Bill Tilden-Alfred H. Chaplin, Jr., pairing were on hand for a preliminary rehearsal.

This will be the only match that will be played today in the men's doubles contest, but the mixed doubles and women's doubles will give the tennis patrons an opportunity of seeing that fair ones in action.

The veterans Chaplin and the fathers and sons' championship will continue throughout the day. Only American players were left after the third round matches of the national doubles championship had been played.



George Grimm

Both French teams which are in the country to oppose America for the Davis Cup were eliminated by the strong American combination which opposed them. Cochet and Brugnon, Frenchmen, in the singles wizardry of Williams and Richards and Johnston and Chandler disposed of France's main hope, LaCoste and Borotra.

The first match of the day in the third round of the national doubles championship was between William T. Tilden, 2d, his partner, Alfred H. Chaplin, Jr., of Springfield, and the Pacific Coast champions Philip Neer and James Davies. This match was certainly a magnificent opener for the day's program. Both teams were in fine form.

In the play during the entire match was lost by the California youngsters were not match for their classier opponents. The scores were 6—3, 6—4, 6—4.

The youngsters did not play Capin entirely as did Washburn and Niles the day previous. Bill Tilden was allowed to do his best which he accomplished to the amusement of the large gallery.

CARDINALS BUY LAYNE, PEORIA'S CRACK GARDENER

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 2 (A.P.)—President Joe Gordon of the Peoria Three-I Association, announced today that the St. Louis Cardinals had purchased Harry Layne outfielder, for $5,000. The Brooklyn Dodgers had an option on his purchase up until last Monday, but failed to exercise it.

Godfrey-Sharkey Bout Postponed to Tuesday

By JACK CONWAY

THE heavyweight clash between Jack Sharkey, New England heavyweight champion, and George Godfrey, great colored battler from the West Coast, has been postponed until next Tuesday, according to an announcement today by officials of the Commercial A. C.

Godfrey slightly injured his ankle in a bout with Tiny Herman last week and request that the bout be set back from tomorrow, the original date.

Godfrey's tremendous physique has a big appeal to the fans. He is six feet three inches tall and weighs 226 pounds. Like Jack Johnson, the way he came to the attention of boxing fans in Boston favorites, Langford schooled the boilermaker in the art of punching.

Jack Conway

Jack Johnson later became interested in stopping Godfrey and taught him the points of the plastic racket. It was then signed by Jack Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey. It was said at the time that Kearns considered Godfrey a more dangerous heavyweight threat than Harry Wills and so wished to secure control of him. Godfrey tired of playing second fiddle to Dempsey and broke away from Kearns. He then formed an alliance with Jimmy Daugherty.

While battling under Daugherty's direction, Godfrey has defeated all of the leading heavyweights who have would consent to enter a ring with him. Harry Wills has refused as much as $100,000 to risk an exchange of blows with Godfrey.

Wills' action gives strength to the claim of Dempsey that Godfrey is the world's best negro heavyweight. Fear of possible defeat is the only reason why Wills turned down a $100,000 bid for a tussle with Godfrey.

Finnegan Loses to Unknown

Philadelphia, Sept. 2—In one of the most surprising upsets of the season, Al Winkler, a substitute and one figured with only a remote chance to go the limit, was given the decision of both judges over Dick (Honey Boy) Finnegan of Boston at Shibe Park last night.

The bout was surprising in many ways, first, not only because Winkler stayed the limit but in his scoring a clean knockdown in the ninth round.

The next big surprise was the decision of the judges because even though Winkler had made a fine showing, it was not figured that he would gain the verdict.

Kearns Brands Jack Dempsey as a Double Crosser

CHAMP HIT BY ATTACK OF EX-BOSS

Former Manager of Boxing King Says He Will Fight to Finish for His Money

THIS is the forty-sixth chapter of Jack Kearns' thrilling story in which he replies to the charges of Jack Dempsey.

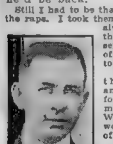
By JACK KEARNS

WHEN I got the jolt from the Boxing Commission, setting Dempsey and myself down for not defending the title in six months' time, I thought it best to let it lay as was. I couldn't explain the situation without telling them that Dempsey had retired, and I didn't want to tell them anything of the kind for I knew he'd be back.

Still I had to be the goat and take the rape. I took them, plenty. I've always taken them for Dempsey. It was part of my business to take them.

I went before the commission and asked them for a license to manage Mickey Walker, welterweight champion of the world.

They turned me down cold. They said that I was the trouble maker. I explained that Dempsey was in Europe on his honeymoon, and no doubt when the excitement of that trip was over he would probably come back to this country and sign to fight in defense of his title. I told them that it was entirely up to Dempsey.



Jack Kearns.

"Dempsey came in here before he sailed to Europe and told me he was willing to fight any man his manager, Kearns, signed for," they told me. "He said it was up to Kearns, his manager. He's ready to fight. Why don't you sign?"

I tried to explain everything except the lone fact that I couldn't sign him up. I didn't want to tell my secret and so I continued to take the rape. If I was to keep the secret it was up to me to take plenty more.

The upshot of the whole business was that I got set down. They refused to give me a license to manage Walker, refused to give me a license to second him against Greb and refused to even allow me into the Polo Grounds when they boxed fought the middleweight for that title.

They had no right to bar me from the Polo Grounds. I was entitled to go there as a private citizen and I would have insisted on it had I wanted a showdown, but I knew that I'd have to tip my nit, so I remained away.

While Dempsey was in Europe he boxed a few times on tour. The tour was an awful bust. Got little money and none in Germany, where he had to put up a fight for his dough. I figure I could have got from $500,000 to $1,000,000 on a European tour for him, whereas he got only expense money.

I went back to California and while I was there Dempsey returned from Europe. On his return he went before the boxing commission and told them he was going to manage his own business.

This action on his part proved what a double crosser he was. He crossed me after I had remained behind to take the falls and the raps the blame and everything else. His starting also at the commission was that he was on his way to California to settle all his business relations with Kearns.

I'm determined that money due me by that fellow will be paid. I'm not a squawker. I'm not writing this story just to take a belt at Dempsey. And from the letters I get every day most readers say I've been too easy on Dempsey.

My contracts with Dempsey are legal. Iron-clad contracts! Not merely written contracts but verbal as well. They are a matter of court record in two or three States so that he hasn't a leg to stand on when the legal battle begins. He's licked before he starts. He knows. Don't forget that.

He knows that I set him up in the big money. Made matches for him and planned and built his road to fortune for him. It was beyond his dreamest beyond the dreams of any man to be had ever been connected with boxing. I made money for him in every shape, and when Dempsey wasn't kidding me or any body else when he tried to walk out.

He wanted to defraud me out of my just dues. He wanted to make one more big fight and gobble all the money himself. Wanted to hog it all without paying me a penny. That's why he walked until August 3rd for our written contract to expire.

I have signed with Rickard for Wills or Tunney or any man he may pick out. I negotiated with Gibson in regard to the Tunney match also. Gibson arranged all the details for the Dempsey and Tunney match and I'll be at the ring side to collect.

Don't think that I won't. I'll get mine. I'll bet any kind of money that I get mine. I'll like to bet against some of Dempsey's dough with Dempsey's lawyers that I get mine.

EVA MORRISON CHALLENGES SWIMMERS

Eva Morrison, woman long distance swimming champion of New England, today issued a challenge to all swimmers to compete in a special endurance contest next Sunday starting at Charlestown bridge.

Miss Morrison denied that she had challenged May Elwell, Revere's seventeen-year-old aquatic marvel, to a swim from Charlestown bridge to Graves Light, as had been reported.

"I am ready and willing to meet Miss Elwell at any distance at any time," declared Miss Morrison. "She is entirely welcome to join me in the swim next Sunday. All she has to do is to be at Charlestown bridge at 9 o'clock in the morning prepared to start.

"I hold the women's long distance record for New England made in a swim to Boston Light on August 1 when I not only negotiated that course but swam back four miles before stopping. That's nearly sixteen miles. Next Sunday I shall try to set a new record, and am confident that I can swim from Charlestown bridge to Boston Light and return, a distance greater than that across the English Channel from Calais to Dover.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

The golfer who lets all his weight fall onto his left foot during the back swing has no pivot, as a usual thing. If he were in cined to take a natural pivot his weight position would prevent it. So instead of swinging his body around, the shoulders doing most of the turning, he must let his left side fall downward. He has to do that in order to see the ball. This makes a very stiff and awkward swing, one wholly devoid of the natural ease and comfort that should mark the exertion. You take the golf club back about as you would a baseball bat. The swings for the two are much alike. Their rhythm is the same and the maximum of velocity with each is reached at the same point. You probably can swing a baseball bat in a natural way. Observe it and apply it to your golf swing.

SOX GAME OFF; DOUBLE BILL TOMORROW

Showers gave the weary Red Sox a chance to rest today, but also fixed up some extra work on the morrow, when a double-header will be staged with the Senators at the Fenway. The break in weather may end the losing streak, which has now stretched to eleven games. Late in the campaign these double bills are generally divided, no matter what clubs happen to be playing.

These Senators arent a tight baseball club. They are good defensively, very good, and pack a mean wallop, but their pitching is something else again. Johnson and Covaleskie are the only dependables, and they feel the burden of the years, and can't work too often.

Old Stanley has to be called into the Wednesday game, so that to save a rout. And he had tossed a full game the day before. The Harris troupe will try anything to cling to fourth place. But a team that explodes after getting a seven run lead shouldn't be hard to beat.

BASEBALL here being more or less defunct, mostly more, the figures are the only recourse for interest. Another month has rattled into the chronicles, and finds both races greatly tightened. The Cards have knocked off the Pirates, and are now in possession of first place in the National by a full game over the Reds, who have the same margin on the champs. And the Cubs are right on the heels of the three.

Both Indians and Athletics have kept after the creaking Yankees and may knock that sure thing out before the real football season gets going. New York pitching has gone all to pot, and Miller Huggins is having a desperate time trying to snatch a series away from any ball club.

THE Athletics had the best month in the American League, while the Cardinals whizzed through all opposition in the older circuit. Following are the current records of the National League contenders:

Reds	18	9	.667
Pirates	16	12	.571
Cubs	19	10	.655

Cards, Reds and Cubs all put on winning streaks during the past weeks, while the Pirates were unable to string up any considerable number of consecutive victories.

The battlers in the American race performed as follows:

RAIN FORCES BRAVES TO POSTPONE BATTLE

New York, Sept. 2.—Rain halted the onslaught of the Boston Braves on the New York Giants here today. The Bancroft aggregation, now occupying the cellar berth by reason of their three setbacks at the hands of the Phillies, were in an expectant mood despite the reverses.

Manager Bancroft told newspapermen here today that he would spend the remainder of the season experimenting with his rookie talent with a view to making some changes before next season in his lineup.

Cards Hold Strong Grip on Top Perch

By winning their final home game from the Pittsburgh Pirates while the Cincinnati Reds were idle, the St. Louis Cardinals today held a somewhat firmer grasp on first place in the hectic National League pennant race.

The Cardinals gained a full game on the Pirates and now are approximately two games in front of the world's champions. They gained a half game on the Reds and now top the latter by one game.

Yesterday marked the final appearance of the Cardinals on the home grounds this season, unless they get into the world series.

The New York Yankees increased their lead over Cleveland in the American League to six games by beating the Philadelphia Athletics while the Indians were idle.

Dempsey Must Fight Within Rules Limit Tunney Declares

By GENE TUNNEY

(Written exclusively for the Boston Evening American and other Hearst papers.)

ONE thing that I am going to insist upon in that battle with Jack Dempsey is this:

"Everything but clean and fair punches are barred."

Dempsey has a habit of getting a bit absent minded concerning the rules and regulations when the battle starts—but he isn't going to get away with that when he meets me.

I understand Jack got no severish over the idea of stopping Tom Gibbons "at any cost" that he became unethical to a point where he banged a lot of his wallops UNDER the Gibbons beltline. Some of the folks who saw that mixup declared afterward that Tom's groins were black and blue from where Jack pounded him.

Jack's one of those intense persons, I guess; so anxious to get his job done and his man carted away in a stretcher that he forgets all about the Marquis of Queensbury family.

In the Firpo fight, Jack did a bit of "forgetting," too. He cracked Luis on the chin before Luis was fully on his feet, after one of the knockdowns and after the first round bell had sounded and Firpo had started to his corner, Jack raced after Firpo and backed him a few around the ring.

Gene Tunney

Jack says, in explaining that, that Firpo's first punch knocked him "goofy" and he didn't know what he was doing. And that may be the real story, for things like that do happen. But Dempsey can't get away with such stuff when he fights me.

The champion is going to keep his punches UP BEYOND the beltline. He's not going to bang me low, as I hear he did when he battled Gibbons. If, by any chance, he should drop me, he isn't going to do any further hitting until I am up on my feet.

RULES MUST BE ENFORCED TO LETTER

And when the good old gong sounds at the end of each round, Dempsey will stop firing punches with its first banging. Rules are rules, and they must apply to Dempsey as they do to everyone else.

I don't want to win this fight in any haphazard way. I want to win with a knockout—and I am supremely certain that I can.

If Dempsey doesn't fight clean, if he doesn't keep his blows where they legally belong, then I am going to put it up to the referee to make him do it—or disqualify him.

By MARTHA LEE

YESTERDAY we considered the question whether or not a man was foolish to buy an automobile on the installment plan, instead of waiting until he could pay in full. We decided that if he was buying some thing worth the time and money needed to pay, and if he could see his way clear to meet each payment as it came due, without scrimping it out of the other budget columns, he was justified in getting his car.

The installment buying method encourages thrift. It is an enforced form of saving. People will economize to meet the payments due when they might not save for the mere purpose of accumulation.

Many a man has bought a car, a bit of land, and finally a house in this way when formerly he never had learned to save a cent. Many a man has learned that he really can meet his running expenses and pay for some of the "good things" of life besides.

The installment method lends people to put money into things of real value, instead of frittering it away on a trifle here and an extravagance there.

If a man is buying a car, or a home, or something he and his family want beyond all else, it puts a responsibility on him which urges him on to better and more work. He is constantly striving toward a great desire, spurred on by the small bills to meet the payments and own the thing.

If you are considering any big purchase on this plan, make out your budget carefully. Try it out and see that it is a practical working scheme which shows that the money will actually be there when those payments come due. If you will fill out the coupon, I shall be glad to send you one of our budget charts, to help you apportion your income.

And, if you'll send me full particulars of income and outgo, and what most in all the world you wish to purchase, I'll see to find a way to make the payments.

Once each year [illegible] mum food allowance [illegible] cents for an adult man and 48 cents for a woman. [illegible] food upon which two people can sustain life and health. Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

MY DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
WILL you kindly tell me the correct form for my wedding invitations? I have no parents or a near relative living in Boston, but will be here for my wedding.

I said the invitation should read: "Miss Rose Marie Smith requests the honor of your presence at her marriage." Please save it should read "Mr. Earl T. Smith requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of his sister."

A CONSTANT READER.

YOUR fiance is correct in his taste and sense of form. It is far better for you to have your brother do the honors for you at your wedding. The invitations should be sent out in his name, he should be invited to precede you at marriage, and he should make the announcement.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:
WILL you kindly inform me the proper manner of entry and seating in a theatre and restaurant for a lady in company with two gentlemen, and vice-versa?

W. P. M.

WHEN the two gentlemen enter a restaurant with a lady, it is the usual custom for the lady to follow the head waiter. However, if one of the gentlemen wishes to indicate a preference in table to the head waiter, it is quite as correct for him to precede the lady. If two ladies enter a restaurant with a gentleman, the two ladies usually follow the head waiter, but it is correct also to do as I indicated above. At the table the lady sits between the gentlemen, unless this seat is inconveniently placed as to serving table door and so forth. It is polite for the host of the party to seat the lady on his right.

[illegible] theatre it is correct for a gentleman of a party to precede the lady or ladies and see that the right seats are assigned and to stand at the head of the row to assist the lady into the row in which their seats are. But it is also correct, and indeed more customary for the gentleman to allow the lady to follow the usher down the aisle. The gentleman or gentlemen decide which order they prefer. The lady should be given the seat between the gentlemen.

Give the Defective Child a Chance in Life

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

EVERY day Norman Brown sat on a seat upon the street-car in front of his home and—well, he just sat there.

Sometimes a kindly passer-by spoke to him and occasionally the boy saw something which brought the light of understanding into his eyes. But the long days dragged by, one upon another.

The neighbors said that Norman was an idiot and indeed he appeared to be one. He was certainly subnormal; and because he was not like other children, his ignorant parents had let him grow up like a weed. No attempt at training or schooling for him was ever given. They were simply sheltered and fed—and tolerated. Consequently he reached the age of fourteen in a pitiable mental condition.

One of the few people who noticed the lonely boy was a young collie, man—who shall be called Jones because that was not his name.

"Something could be done for that poor little fellow," said Jones one day after stopping for a minute to speak to Norman.

An Jones went on down the street he passed an old colored man who had some Belgian hares for sale.

"I'm going to give Norman a pair," he said to himself.

The boy's face lighted with pleasure when he saw the small animals.

"If I give you two of these rabbits will you take care of them?" Jones asked the boy.

Norman grinned and said "Yas."

"Well you find green things for them to eat and give them fresh water and keep the dogs away from them?" Jones continued.

Norman nodded his head vigorously.

And just then the boy's father came to the door.

Then he told the father how cruel it was to permit his child to remain useless and dependent. He convinced him that Norman had sense enough to learn a few simple duties and to gradually absorb some of the elementary lessons of life.

Mr. Brown promised to have patience and to keep continually at the duty of training his unfortunate son to perform [illegible] small tasks.

Along in the Spring Jones stopped one day to see how the "rabbit farm" was progressing. "He spends most of his time out in the yard with those rabbits," said Mr. Brown. "He just sits there for hours and watches them."

Norman is a man now. Of course he is way below normal in the matter of intelligence. But he has learned to raise Belgian hares and to grow a vegetable garden. Thereby he makes his own living—and what is more important, he is contented.

There is hardly a community in America that hasn't as simple-minded boy or girl. And almost without exception there is some one thing that the child could be taught to do.

Budget Problems Solved for Interested Readers

I think $10 a week or two, where one is working, would be a fair minimum food budget. Four people, I am sure, could get along comfortably on from $14 to $16.

Dear Mrs. N. L.—I wish I could be of more help to you in solving your very real financial problem. It is not easy to support one's self and husband on $17 a week and at the same time pay $6 weekly rent, $1 a week for insurance, $1 for gas and electricity, besides clothing, food, clothes, etc.

A $17 budget ordinarily would allow $6 for food, $3.50 for shelter, $1.50 for clothing, $1 for savings or insurance, $2.50 for operating, which means heat, gas and light, $2.50 for personal, out of which would come the medicine and doctor's bills. You are paying $8 a week for rent, however, which means that $2.50 must be taken away from your other allotments.

Mrs. C. P. E. has an income of $45 a week for three in the family. Asks how much rent she can afford. You can safely lay aside $10 a week for rent and business carfares, $4.75 for savings and insurance, $10.50 for food, $5.50 for clothing, $4.25 for operating and $9.50 for personal, covering all other expenses.

Miss F. R. E., about to be married, asks for a budget for $26 a week for two. During the first of your married life, you will want to save more than the usual 10 per cent allowance, to be used for the later years when you must not be able to put even 1 dollar away. I would suggest: Savings $10, rent and business carfares $10, food $10.50, clothing $6.50, operating $4.50 and personal $6.50.

Miss H. B. D., business girl making $20 a week, asks what she can afford to pay for board and washing. Budget will allow you $11 a week for room and board, including business carfares and lunches, $3 a week for clothing, $2.50 for savings or insurance, which must come laundry and all service such as shoe shines, manicures, facials, etc. The remaining $3.50 is alloted $2 and personal needs. Personal covers everything not a living necessity.

Furnishing the Home

By Marian Moore

AUTUMN squalls come unexpectedly and you want to be prepared for the first log blaze of the season.

In the above group, the small butterfly table serves a double purpose, as it is within convenient reach of the big chair and at the same time provides decoration for the wall section between the fireplace and the window.

It is backed up to the wall and not to the chair, as the wall is the more obvious and solid background, and the books which are between book-ends are also set up against the wall. One leaf of the table is kept down, while the other extends to the chair arm.

The bright pods of the Chinese lantern bush, or the rusty foliage of Autumn trees may take the place of Summer flowers, their orange, brown and russet tones being reflected in the new shade on the junior lamp.

Perhaps you are considering the purchase of an odd chair for just such a group. I strongly recommend that you select a model equipped with a reversible cushion, plain on one side, figured on the other, so that you may have the benefit of the gay colorful upholstery, with an occasional reversion to plain effects for a restful change.

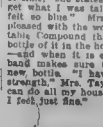
ATTRACTIVE WOMEN
If You Would Be Attractive You Must Be Healthy

A beautiful woman is always admired. There are many types of beauty. But no woman can be truly beautiful unless she is healthy. Radiant vitality makes any attractive woman, however plain a woman's features may be.



Many a woman has found her health improved through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Weakness, loss of weight, and a pale complexion were a few things of which Mrs. J. C. Taylor of Box 211, Tallahassee, Florida, complained before she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "I could not even sit down and talk to a friend for any length of time," she states. "I would forget what I was talking about and felt so blue." Mrs. Taylor is so pleased with the work of the Vegetable Compound that she keeps a bottle of it in the house at all times—and when it is empty, her husband makes sure that she has a new bottle. "I have regained my strength." Mrs. Taylor writes. "I can do all my housework now and I feel just fine."

PEACHES are as luscious and ripe as they can be. Inasmuch as they are also inexpensive, we can indulge to our heart's content for a few short weeks. Peaches for breakfast, peaches for pie, peach cobbler, peach cup, puddings, ice cream and peach tarts.

Let's start with a country peach pie. Probably we will and why not too, for nothing goes right to the heart of the true American like a peach pie.

Country Peach Pie—Cut 3-3 cup of shortening into 2 cups of pastry flour with a knife until it is the consistency of small peas. Add enough water to hold it together. Divide and roll about ¼ inch thick. Cover pie plate, and brush over with a little melted fat and then dust with flour. This prevents the juice soaking in. Now peel and slice 6 or 10 peaches into the pie plate and cover with ¾ cup of powdered sugar. Sprinkle with lemon juice and salt. Dot with bits of butter. Cover with the remaining pie crust and bake in a hot oven for about 15 minutes, and bake 15 minutes more at a moderate heat.

Should your family prefer their peach pie in the form of tarts, you can make the filling by cooking 3 cups of peaches cut in eighths with 1 cup of sugar, 1 tablespoon of lemon juice, 1 tablespoon of butter and a few grains of salt, until tender. Be sure to chill this mixture before filling the tarts.

Peach Polly—Arrange a layer of peaches in a baking dish. Sprinkle with soft bread crumbs and a little sugar, then dot with bits of butter. Pour in a little peach juice, if using preserved peaches, or a bit of water. Repeat until the dish is full. Add 1 tablespoon of lemon juice and bake for 20 minutes. Serve with cream. You will average about 3 cups of soft bread crumbs.

Peach Cobbler—One egg beaten, 1 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons shortening, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup milk, 1¼ cups pastry flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 6 or 8 peaches.

Add the sugar to the egg and beat until it is creamy. Add the shortening and beat again until it is thoroughly blended. Now add the flour, baking powder and salt, which have been sifted together, alternately with the milk. Put a cup spade down in a baking dish and fill the dish two-thirds full of peaches, which have been peeled and cut into quarters. Pour the batter over this. Bake in a moderate oven for 1 hour. Serve hot with sweetened whipped cream or hard sauce.

Peach Sherbet—Boil 1 cup of sugar with 2 cups of water for 20 minutes; let the syrup cool and then add the juice of 1 orange, ½ lemon and ¾ cup of peach pulp, ½ cup of granulated sugar, juice of ½ a lemon and 1½ cups of thin cream. Pare and stone choice, ripe peaches and press the pulp through a ricer. Add the sugar and lemon juice and turn into the can of a freezer, packed in ice and salt. Add the cream and freeze.

A Thrilling Story of Night Life and Night Clubs; a Mad Whirl of Adventure

CHAPTER XI.

A SECOND nurse, tall and angular, with a face like a narrow, expressionless mask, relieved Mrs. Meers at 6 o'clock. Her name, she told Joslyn in a colorless voice, was Miss Laws, and she would be on night duty as long as the case lasted.

Miss Laws proved herself immensely the more competent of the two and stole soft-footedly through a long succession of nerve-torturing nights, during which Joslyn found sleep in fragmentary bits that left her constantly on a ragged edge of suffering.

If the nights were bad the days were worse. Mrs. Meers, whatever her good intentions, was gifted with an awkwardness that marked her every movement with some kind of noise. To the taut nerves of Joslyn the dropping of a spoon on a plate became a startling clatter that tore and reverberated to the furthermost filament of her network of raw nerves.

The careless closing of a door had the explosive force of an artillery burst. All of this, Joslyn realized, was abnormal, but it was beyond her control. Her principal relief came from the daily visits of Dr. Reiger.

"You are getting better slowly," he would tell her. "Remember, I did not promise to work miracles. It takes time, girl—time. What would you say if I told you that in a few weeks I might send you on a pleasant sea voyage? The West Indies might work wonders for you later on."

Briethalter, for some reason, kept away from Joslyn; she had not seen him since the night of her collapse. The absence of his interest, however was constantly at hand; flowers and fruit were lavishly supplied. There arrived, too, frequent packages from the smartest shops of Fifth avenue, filmy pretties of gossamer silk garments for all purposes; an endless army of toilet articles selected regardless of expense; crystal bottles with gold caps containing Paris perfume, tiny Moroccо bedroom slippers of an exact shade to match a kimono of heavy brocade. These things represented Briethalter's taste, which, though not always flawless, was never downright bad.

Although Doctor Reiger was constant in his assurances that she was improving, Joslyn herself knew that she was barely holding her own. All of her days and nights were spent in bed with a consequent weakening of her body and a marked loss in weight. Her face now was conspicuously thin and totally lacking in color.

"You Aren't Getting Your Sleep, Dear," She Said

"You ain't getting your sleep, hon—that's all there is to it," Mrs. Meers told her. "The doctor ought to give you something but he ain't not any good for nothing. I'll tell you I could trust you I might slip you a little soothing powder myself some time. It wouldn't harm a baby and it would do you a world of good."

With her whole system crying out for rest—for surcease from the fatigue that hammered at her temples and throbbed under her eyes—Joslyn with a final act of desperate courage refused the offer of Mrs. Meers. If the city had degraded her it had also lent her something of its wisdom and she recognized the horrible certainty that she was under the care of a drug addict.

But she did not tell Doctor Reiger. The combined anxiety that seems every thought of Jim Kelvin and the tedious price that she was to pay for her safety were too agonizing to face without help. The time might come, she realized exhaustedly, when she might welcome oblivion—escape—even all responsibility. Suicide would have been one way but it would, she feared, seal the doom of Kelvin . . . in Briethalter she sensed, as though by some obscure telepathy, a strain of the eternal Shylock.

Doctor Reiger, one day when she asked him, told her reluctantly that she might, for a few minutes, be allowed to see Briethalter.

"But don't allow yourself to get excited," he said. "I didn't learn all the facts in your case because, for my purpose, they were not necessary. But I am at liberty to suppose that Mr. Briethalter, in some way, is connected with your breaking down. Frankly, you are getting along rather slowly. I will allow him to see you for fifteen minutes this morning, more as an experiment than anything else."

Briethalter came to her, meticulously correct in his manner of sympathy. "I hear perfectly splendid reports about you," he said, unconvincingly, but Joslyn was not deceived by the buoyancy of his tone.

"No, I know that I'm not doing well," she said. "I wanted to see you about Jim. Tell me about him—is he safe? Where is he?"

"Let's Not Discuss That," He Said, Shaking His Head

Briethalter shook his head. "Let's not discuss that," he urged. "Everything will be all right. What you must do now is to keep from worrying. We are doing everything possible to get you well, Joslyn, and you must work with us."

"Where is he—is he safe?"

"I'll tell you this—he is entirely safe and well."

"Can't I see him? Couldn't you bring him here. I just want to see him with my own eyes—to be sure—"

They were temporarily alone in the room and Briethalter came close to the bed and took up one of her frail hands. "Please, please don't worry yourself. I can't bring him here at present, but you have my word that he is all right. You have nothing to worry about."

She was unable to hold back the tears. "Why don't you be good to me?" she said, brokenly. "I can't stand this—I'll die. Look . . . I'm begging you for mercy. You don't want me . . . look at me. I'm just a broken neck . . . I'm all bones and hollows and sickness . . . Why, in the name of God, can't you let Jim and me go?"

"I'm getting you all wrought up," Briethalter said, rising. "But don't worry—you'll come back. You'll be lovelier than ever, dear. And now, for the present—good-by."

When he was gone, Joslyn, for the first time, had Miss Laws prop her up with cushions in a great chair beside the window. Fourteen stories below the lights of the street flickered and glowed; sounds, softened by distance, rose gently to the window.

Warmth of Spring was in the air and Miss Laws, when Joslyn asked her, thought there might be no harm in raising the window, since the patient was warmly wrapped.

"Tarnished Wings"

By BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER LXVIII

NOTHING, most likely. Tony wasn't the kind of man who chased a woman.

Merry remembered how years ago he had refused to speak to her on the street when he had tried to flirt with him. Had deliberately tried to "pick him up."

Through the open door of the kitchen the telephone on the wall of the front hall caught her eye with its beckoning gleam. Suppose she walked over to it now and called her husband? Suppose she did? It would be so easy.

"Girls," she said suddenly, turning to the two of them, "girls, don't you think I ought to telephone Tony Gaines? He's not his mother, and wouldn't it be a nice friendly thing to do?"

Both of them, curiously enough, took their heads promptly.

"Never call up a man," advised Dassie in her tart way. "Besides, if Tony Gaines wanted to see you, he'd be all the chance in the world to do it since he's been here."

Jinny gave her a long and thoughtful look. And I shouldn't be surprised if he did call you up himself," she said, "he asked enough questions about you to fill a book—room, I know."

So Merry decided not to use the telephone that night. But on the way upstairs with a tray for Mama she gave it a longing look.

Mama's room was darkened, as it always was when she had one of her sick headaches. It was filled with the sharp scent of the smelling salts she was holding to her nose.

"I've brought you some milk toast that Jinny made for you. Will you eat it, dear?" Merry asked her gently. But Mama waved the tray away and shuddered.

"Don't even talk to me about food," she groaned.

The girl stood there for a minute, looking down at her big prostrate figure lying across the bed.

"Mama," she said softly, after a pause, "Mama—Tony Gaines isn't married."

"What?" Mama rolled over and looked up at her through the gloom. "He's not? Who told you so?"

"Jinny. She met him the afternoon when she was out with the twins."

"Hmm," Mama pondered, "hmm." "I—I thought I'd call him up," Merry told her. "Jinny says he asked all about me? Would you telephone him?"

There was another long pause. Then Mama said, "No, indeed!" in a firm voice.

She repeated it. "No, indeed! He knows how to get hold of you if he wants to see you. Don't ever run after a man, Merry."

Without saying anything more, Merry started downstairs with the untouched tray . . .

That was what all women said—"Don't run after a man."

And yet wasn't that what all women did, as a matter of fact, Merry pondered.

Perhaps they didn't do it in a bold, obvious way. But they did it all the same! They had their own dainty, secret little ways of roping one male.

Frills of Yesteryear

He Frowns at Her Immodesty She Smiles at His Frippery

Drawn By Dorothy Flack

BEYOND a doubt, she is attractive, Miss Nineteen Twenty-Six. How successfully she apes her brother and still how securely she has maintained her feminine charms.

Current hair is closely cropped and sleekly brushed, trousers, shirt and necktie—is it possible that they were not purchased in a select men's shop—and horrors, even a carelessly-held cigarette between her fingers. But there are girlish curls escaping over her smooth brow, the very hands that hold the cigarette are slender and charming. She is girlish still.

Then why does he look at her so frowningly, so disapprovingly, this straight gentleman who has stepped out of her father's picture gallery?

It does not occur to him that she would look just as disapprovingly, or perhaps amusedly, at his sateen knee-breeches, his real lace frills, his powdered curlers. He may think her immodest, but is not he, with his ringlets, his powdered wig, just as much open to criticism as she?—DOROTHY FLACK.

minute," he remarked. "I promised Bones we'd take him and his girl up with us."

They smiled at one another, Molly meaningly and personally, Jock in a casual sort of way, "She's all right for a prom," he told himself. "Clothes, and looks, and an awfully good dancer. If only she doesn't start talking like an idiot—Oh Lord, she's going to!" he finished. He knew that preliminary flicker of the eyes.

"Jock," said Molly softly, "there were a million girls on that train, and I felt so superior to all of them, you can't imagine, because they were coming to the prom with any old boy and I was coming with you. Oh, Jock, I'm so glad to be here—so glad you're a little glad to have me—"

The timely reappearance of Bones at this instant and the necessity of a reply. He wore a fatuous grin, and his arm he guided around the graceful girl with greenish eyes and cornsnos of yellow hair sweeping onto her cheeks below a green hat. Jock identified her as the or in l of the favorite paragraph in Bones' collection.

"Norma, this is the roommate, Jock Hamill—don't believe anything he tells you about me. Miss Norma Knight, Jock. You know—the one I talk in my sleep about—"

Jock completed the mutual introductions, and observed that the two girls met with an instant hostility, only faintly veiled. "All prom-girls hate all other prom-girls," he made a mental note.

The ride up the hill to the fraternity house was accomplished in short order, and the girls escorted inside.

"Don't take long, you too," Bones commanded when they had set down numerous suitcases and were preparing to withdraw. "There's an inter-fraternity tea dance at the Union at four o'clock, and you have to meet everybody and lap up a couple of cocktails apiece between now and then."

Jock and Bones descended the stairs again and encountered Dopey Lane and his girl just entering. Dopey presented them mournfully.

"Jock Hamill, Cecily Graves. And Bones Allen."

Jock's first thought was that she ought to put cold cream, or whatever it was they usually put, on her hands. The one that he took in greeting was rough and chapped. "Hello, Miss Graves."

"How-do-you-do?"

Tinkling silver voice. But he was not a snob from his voice and the handicap and a certain fundamental prettiness, Cecily Graves was all wrong. Her clothes were wrong, and the way she wore them was wrong, and even the silence that followed her "How-do-you-do" was wrong. Girls ought to say something more, immediately. When they did not they gave you an impression of timidity and stupidity.

"See you later," Dopey nodded and conducted her past them toward the stairway.

"Gee, he did pick a quince, didn't he?" muttered Bones.

Jock looked thoughtful. "I believe I kind of like her," he said. And added, as Bones stared incredulously, "Anyway, I'm sorry for the poor kid."

The girls who attend college proms are tabulated neatly within an hour of their arrival. In undergraduate language, they are either knockouts, or else they're dud thuds. There is no middle class. The knockouts enjoy two days of exhilarating popularity and unalloyed bliss. The dud thuds look on and wonder miserably, why they had been so awfully excited about coming . . .

Everybody in the Zeta Kappa house—members of the fraternity, visiting young ladies, everybody—knew that Dopey Lane's prom-girl was a dud thud. They knew it the minute she came downstairs to join the group congregated in the living room. By the dark blue taffeta gown that bunched in the wrong places they knew it. By the heavy black stockings in a year of sheer flesh-colored ones, and by the hair that wasn't shingled, and by the face that wasn't rouged, and by the lack of self-confidence they knew it. But being ultra-modern boys and girls, unto whom 'Everyone for himself' was the law, they did not care. They stared at her, hard, for a second or two. They summed her up. "No looks, no style, no pep." Then they forgot her utterly, the girls because they were not afraid of her, the boys because they were not interested.

Pep! Fuel for the speed of the generation! Sine qua non of the ultra-moderns! The Zeta Kappa living room waltzed with it. The atmosphere was hectic with it. Every damsel strove to prove at once, then and there, that she had more pep than anybody else in the room, any other damsel. You should have seen Norma Knight gulping straight Scotch from a bottle. You should have seen the celebrated Winky Winters, prom-trotter extraordinary, seated atop the piano, beating time on its mahogany with her sharp small heels. You should have seen Gloria Martin, minister's daughter, doing an imitation of Ted Lewis with somebody's derby hat. You should have seen Molly kissing each man as she met him, saying, 'Eventually—why not now?"

Pep! Something a little different, a little conspicuous, a little rowdy, and extremely loud—pep!

Through it all, Cecily Graves sat in a great armchair pushed to one side. She seemed literally to be clinging there, as one would cling to a small safe isle in a mad and treacherous sea. She was quite alone. Even Dopey had left her, drawn to the other side of the room by the irresistible world of conversation going on.

Through it all, Cecily Graves sat in a great armchair pushed to one side. She seemed literally to be clinging there, as one would cling to a small safe isle in a mad and treacherous sea. She was quite alone. Even Dopey had left her, drawn to the other side of the room by the irresistible world of conversation going on.

Through it all, Cecily Graves sat motionless—that is, motionless except for her eyes, which darted here and there and everywhere excitedly. She was missing a trick," Jock told himself.

After a time, meeting her glance over the top of Molly's head, he winked at her in a friendly way. Her reaction was immediate and pathetic. She seemed to shrink even further into the depths of the great chair; and then, an instant later, she smiled. Tremulously. Gratefully. With a look in her eyes like the eyes of a dog when you pat him.

This was too much for Jock. He abandoned Molly in the middle of the floor and went across to her. He seized her wrists and pulled her to her feet. "You've got to dance with me, lady."

Just that. No "You look lonesome," no "why all by yourself"—none of the tactless remarks that another young man, with the best intentions in the world but without Jock's sensitive understanding, might have made. Instead, "You've got to dance with me"—as though he wanted her so tremendously, as though he could not wait.

And the brief glance he had of her face before it tucked itself out of sight was not his shoulder told him unmistakably that he had made a friend for life.

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

"WHAT have you to tell me? You didn't drag me to the city to—eat, did you? No wonder you are so squat and fat if food is all you think about.

"I've two hours," said Madame Petrucci with satisfaction, getting out a small fan and waving it vigorously. "I seldom lunch at all. The studio is always so full. Today I gave them a problem in self-caste to work out. I told them to find things for lunch in the ice chest. I gave one of them a pair of gloves to mend. I set them tasks. I shall not hurry. Shall we snacks before lunch or do you prefer to eat first?"

"I don't smoke," I said, feeling that I was sitting on all the pins and needles in the world. "I don't like it."

"You disapprove?" asked Madame Petrucci intently.

"Not for those who want to smoke," I replied, careful not to offend her prejudices in favor of the thing I detested. "But I don't see why I should have to do something I dislike merely to be in step with fashion."

"I thought you meant be old fashioned," she said severely. "I like to see women up to date. Of course your being such a Puritan might explain—"

"Might explain what?" I asked eagerly, seizing upon this opening gambit to the conversation I longed so much I dreaded to have begin.

"Many things."

Madame Petrucci waved those capable yet beautiful hands of hers, whose slender fingers belied the stocky pleasant figure and the grizzled mannish head.

"The things you brought me here to tell me?" I asked.

She looked at me appraisingly, smiling slowly the while.

"You have suffered also," she said at last. "You will recall that to the very day I came to your house to protest against the picture Nicholas Perry made by combining mine with one of Arlette. I told you—what marriage did to me."

"It cost you your voice," I said half to myself.

"It broke my heart," said Diane Petrucci, quietly. "My husband laughed at the things which meant most to me. He cost me my courage. When my first audience applauded me, I thought they were laughing at me—was he had. I broke down. You will not break. I am here to see that no pesky male eats your youth and your courage and twists them—all out of shape as mine were twisted. But first your heart must break. And I—I must do it."

There was the light of fanaticism in the keen eyes of her who had been Dora Peters of Athens, Georgia, and who was now the great city's greatest music teacher.

"Must I—how?" I asked.

"Are you afraid?" demanded Mme. Petrucci.

"Yes," I said simply. "I love him so."

Mme. Petrucci looked at me sternly for a moment or two. Then she asked almost coldly:

"Do you love him more than your pride or your honor or your honest wish to make something of the gifts life has given you?"

"I—I don't know," I said.

"You must—save me, said Diane Petrucci.

"I would sacrifice everything," I said quietly, "to stay with Jim if he needed me."

"He doesn't need you any more, she told me again. "He doesn't want you any more. He wants to be free. There is someone else—"

"How do you know?" I demanded, convinced by something cruelly earnest in her manner.

"I brought you here to tell you it," said Diane Petrucci.

And what hurt me most was the pity in her eyes as she leaned forward to tell me why the one thing I could do for Jim now was—leave him.

"If you love your husband you will set him free." said Madame Diane Petrucci.

Her tone was quiet, yet it had a certain rustic. It almost seemed a if her dramatic instinct relished what her womanly instincts wanted to regret. She shook her grizzled head with its mane of short gray curls, stirred her squat figure, and leaning forward across the table she fingered the stem of a water goblet with her capable yet artistic hands.

All around me there was the drone of voices. The garden of the woman's club hummed with gayety. I found myself wishing that all the pretty women in their summer ensembles of chiffon or silk would go away—would never have existed to me. I could hear snatches of conversation. Then Diane Petrucci again said:

"I thought he was deeply interested when he brought her to me She was a lovely little creature then—that Arlette."

"Was?" I repeated. "And now? You speak as if she were—dead or—is poor—"

"She was a lovely creature," the music teacher replied in her rich contralto that had almost made her a great singer instead of a great instructor of singers. "She was a lovely. And now she is—what she has chosen to become."

Meat is most digestible when boiled, most nutritious when roasted.

Lightship keepers are afloat for two months and ashore for one.

In Arvada, Wyo., there is a drinking fountain, the water of which can be set on fire at any time. "Burning Water" exists in several places on Powder River, a Wyoming stream, where natural gas is found bubbling up through water. Some bubbles will ignite when a match is applied. During the winter peculiar formations are caused by the gas seepage. When the river is frozen over, gas accumulates under the ice and as a pressure gathers. It forces thin sprays of water through the weaker spots in the ice and these sprays freeze in curious formations of arches and low pillars.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

A HOME without a husband is like a book without a theme, a song without a refrain, a picture without a motif.

After marriage, a woman should close her eyes, a man his ears—and both of them, their mouths.

Mowing the front lawn on Saturday afternoon would have the same effect on a man's figure, appetite and digestion as a game of golf—but no woman has ever been able to make him SEE it that way.

Don't worry about the hardness of a man's heart; it's the kind whose heart is soft and impressionable, that will keep you guessing and worrying, from the wedding-day to the grave.

Many a man who was adept at making love in a canoe, can't keep off his wife's toes, or refrain from upsetting her nerves in a ten-room house.

Nowadays, it appears almost as difficult for a man to concentrate all his love on one woman as it would be for him to choose a pet fly or a favorite ten-dollar bill.

A man's idea of economy is to buy something he needs in order to buy something he ought not to have—a woman's, is to rip up something useful, in order to make it over into something ornamental.

HOW TO COMBAT ANAEMIA CASES

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

"WHY do I keep on growing weak in spite of the fact that I eat so much food?" asks one correspondent.

You may be anaemic.

Anaemia is a deficiency of blood in quantity. Sometimes there is a deficiency of its most important constituents, particularly of red blood corpuscles.

Anaemia presents many varieties. From the clinical point of view, it is a condition of the system in which impoverishment of the blood, whether from want or from waste, is associated with symptoms of imperfect exercise of one or more vital functions.

The causes of anaemia are multiple and complex. It may come from defective alimentation, including insufficient food.

It may come from troubles of various digestive organs, especially if these troubles are of a chronic nature. In these cases the gravity of anaemia is dependent on the nature of the digestive trouble.

Diseases of the stomach very promptly provoke anaemia in infants as well as in adults.

The diseases of the infant which most often are responsible for anaemia are dyspeptic troubles.

In adults gastric ulcer and atrophic state of the gastric glands may also result in grave anaemia.

Chronic inflammation of the intestines with or without ulceration, ulcer of the duodenum, cancer, chronic appendicitis, constriction of the rectum, intestinal parasites, etc., usually are attended with anaemia.

Amongst liver disorders, jaundice is the disease in which anaemia is an important symptom.

The deficiency of blood may be due either to the disease itself, or to the "regime" and treatment which digestive troubles necessitate.

In the first instance, the alimentary disease is associated with imperfect digestion and assimilation of the food. Consequently the organism is deficiently supplied with nutritive elements, and anaemia results.

Prolonged intoxication of the system with poisonous products present in the alimentary tract are also amongst this group of causes.

To the second group belongs that variety of anaemia which results from a prolonged diet recommended in order to cure some troubles of the alimentary tract, such, for example, as chronic diarrhoea.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been very much in love with a young man for the past two years. We went together until a few months ago. Then we had a misunderstanding.

The young man I love and I are in high school, while the young man with whom I go to dances works.

I have been told that this young man, whom I still love, cares for me.

Please tell me how I can win back the heart of the man I love. It is impossible to forget him.

HEARTBROKEN.

WHY do you not give a little party at your house? Invite three or four young people, and include among them the young man you love. This will be only courteous on your part and it will show him that you wish to continue the friendship.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By John P. Medbury

EAST money is becoming so scarce in New York that ten thousand gold-diggers are planning to go out on strike.

THEY'RE demanding more cash and fewer promises.

THEY want smaller taxis and bigger cops.

TIMES are so hard lately that one girl says she doesn't know where her next limousine is coming from.

TWICE last month she had to pay for her own dinner.

SHE became desperate. She finally tried to cut down expenses by getting rid of one of her lap dogs.

ONE pocket prospector said she had to work a whole evening to get a fur coat.

THE fellow was willing to give her a muskrat, but she was holding out for a mink.

AT two o'clock in the morning they were still arguing. When she looked at her watch and saw how late it was, she compromised on a squirrel.

IT broke her heart to think she had to beg so long. In the old days she could get an automobile in an hour.

AND if she wanted to work an hour and a half she could get a yacht.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

You can put vinegar to all sorts of good uses. For instance, it is always advisable to put a teaspoonful in the water in which you are boiling meat. In the ordinary way the meat may be rather tough. The vinegar, however, will make it tender in any case.

A few drops of vinegar in the water in which eggs are being poached will make them set more quickly.

Old potatoes soon go black in cooking. But a teaspoonful of vinegar in the water will prevent this.

To purify a room heat a shovel and put a little vinegar on it, then leave it in the room until the fumes have dispersed.

In practically every home at the present time one member at least has a relaxed throat—a symptom of cold. Gargle made of equal quantities of vinegar and warm water will do much towards making a cure.

In the same way, vinegar and honey mixed in equal parts will give great relief where a member of the family has a cough.

An egg that is slightly cracked can be boiled successfully if a teaspoonful of vinegar be added to the water.

If snappers on garments are securely fastened before being put through the mangle they will not crush.

Should a pipe burst the first thing to do is not to send for a plumber, but to turn off the water supply at the main stopcock. Many householders, however, do not know where it is and they should ascertain without delay. It might be wise, too, to turn it to and fro a few times, so that it will work easily if the need arises. At the same time that the main supply is turned off all taps in the house should be turned on in order to empty the pipes.

find diamonds and get rich. Half a dozen may keep the money and leave it to spoil their children. The thousands will complain that they had no luck.

YOU KNOW ABOUT Krishnamurti, the young Hindu who receives messages from "beyond." Another Hindu, worth ten million Krishnamurtis, is Assam Dina—enormously rich, married to an American girl. He inherited recently the astronomical observatory on Mt. Blanc, highest mountain in Europe, is bringing it up to d e, and next year will build on a nearby mountain a better observatory, equipped with the world's most powerful telescope.

This gentleman from India sends us his scientific materials by airplane and plans regular airplane service between the lower regions and Mt. Blanc by the eagle's route.

THAT'S THE KIND of Hindu the world needs, one that with his telescope will look out into space, find what is really happening there; not somebody so all over and imagine that his poor, feeble little brain can be made a receiving station for Divine wisdom.

THERE IS GREAT mental power among the people of India, dwarfed and held down by a hot climate, vicious laws and the degrading caste system. Set free in a better climate, it might produce many Assam Dinas, and a surprise for Britain, that inhabit and rules India now, as a semi-benevolent ferret might rule a rabbit warren.

HAMILTON FYFE, successful editor of the London Daily Herald, British labor organ, leaves his job to devote his life to "vagabondage, seeing the world."

Many men do that, thinking it rather noble. In reality they do what every monkey does as he roams the woods. Useless and this world depends not on how much you see of it, but how much you do in it.

MR. FYFE predicts that twenty years hence there will be only politically two parties, "one consisting of Laborites and Liberals, the other of Communists."

EVERYTHING IS possible, but at present there is only one really powerful party in Britain, France, Germany or America, the party of well-organized capital, which runs the world, with plenty of advice and criticism, to which it pays little attention.

ANOTHER JOYOUS Wall Street closing, plenty of cheap money at 4½, the "general price level" higher, railroad stocks going up. Why shouldn't they go up, when government says to the public, "You've got to pay the poor railroads enough to keep going and give them a fair return on money invested." Government doesn't say that about the mines, for to say it would be Bolshevism, or at the least, Socialism.

What Wins the Fight?

It Isn't Big Muscles or Strong Jaw, but Something Smaller

WHICH WILL WIN, AND WHAT WILL WIN?

Millions of men, young and old, have their minds concentrated on the Dempsey-Tunney fight, the exhibition that will attract tens of thousands, give its promoters more than a million dollars, and do good to NOBODY.

But this fight reminds young men, so much interested, that even in prize fights it is not mere muscle, powerful jaw or ugly face that WINS A CHAMPIONSHIP.

All fights are won inside the skull.

Every blow, every effort of every muscle is directed by a nerve. At the end of the nerve there is an actual explosion when the brain orders the muscle to work. And every nerve carries its orders to the muscle FROM THE BRAIN.

A man with half the strength of another may beat the other because his mind and WILL ARE STRONGER.

The force of a blow is a matter of speed. SPEED gives force, not big muscles or a heavy body.

The tallow candle fired from a rifle will go through an oak door. The SPEED at which the candle travels more than overcomes the strength of the oak.

It is the brain, the quick, instantaneous discharge of nervous force locked up in the skull that gives the fist its speed, and will give the world's heavyweight championship to one of these two fighters.

Thousands of men, some of whom will be at the ringside when Dempsey and Tunney fight, are fifty or one hundred per cent. stronger than either of the heavyweights. Many men as strong as both of them put together would be knocked out by either of these two fighters with the greatest ease. Because victory IS IN THE MIND, NOT IN MUSCLE.

If you could tell which is the best, strongest, most determined brain back of these two faces, you could tell which will win the fight.

Driving and fighting power is located in the back brain, underneath the back part of the skull.

IDEAS are born in the front part of the brain, back of the forehead. They are CARRIED OUT by the driving power in the back brain.

The power that wins in a championship fight is probably locked up in a part of the brain so small that you could hardly see it without a microscope.

Power is WILL, which doesn't depend on size or a fierce looking jaw, or a savage frown. The frown and the big jaw may have been developed by the effect of the will. But, in themselves, they are nothing.

Young gentlemen, cultivate your minds and your will, for everything that is worth while is inside of the skull.

Little Burial Alive

The Human Race Has Enough Other Things to Trouble It

The fear of being buried alive is quite common. Every once in a while a man makes a will in which he prescribes measures to assure his death before he is buried.

The investigation of a London physician shows that this is a needless bogey.

Premature interment is extremely rare, for conditions that imitate death, such as syncope and the like, would hardly deceive a medical man very long.

Such conditions rarely persist more than a short time. The patient either dies or makes some movement showing he is alive.

A recent examination of the recorded instances in Great Britain of alleged premature burial under the auspices of qualified medical authority discloses not a solitary case that is supported by sufficient evidence.

A French writer who held the opposite view, after going through history as far back as Plutarch, found only forty-six cases, many of them confessedly legendary, and most of them with very slight evidence of genuineness.

Altogether fears of being buried alive seem to be unnecessary. The human race has enough things to trouble it without adding those.

Postponed for Rain

The Chinese do not have baseball games; hence they do not postpone them on account of rain.

One of their principal amusements, however, is a public beheading, and one was postponed recently because the heavy downfall of rain would have caused too much inconvenience to the spectators and officials concerned.

There is nothing like being nice and comfortable at a beheading.

Gun Toting

The National Crime Commission was quite right recently in taking the position that the carrying of lethal weapons should be confined to policemen and army officers.

They suggested that high taxes be imposed upon pistols and a system of registering them should be adopted so that the sale of small arms should be circumscribed.

The restriction on carrying arms would do much to reduce the prevalence of crime.

BOTH AMERICANS--- BOTH INSPIRING

By Dr. FRANK CRANE

AMERICA is singularly fortunate in the two greatest men of its history—Washington and Lincoln.

Perhaps both of them are equally revered, and that all classes of people respect them and their memory is significant.

For they come from different strata of society. Washington was an aristocrat. His habits and opinions and customs were those of the gentlemen of his time.

Lincoln was a child of the people. He was born in poverty and his early life was a series of struggles against adverse conditions.

Both men won their way to popularity against much that was adverse. That both equally served their country in time of need is significant. It shows that there is a place in America for all sorts and conditions of people.

There is opportunity to serve one's country for the rich as well as for the poor, for the highborn as well as the lowborn.

One of the amazing things in the late war was the readiness which was displayed by the bluebloods and nobility to take their place in the ranks and risk their lives for their country. Those who have means are supposed to dodge responsibilities, but the sons of the nobility and of the wealthy appeared to make as good soldiers as their less favored brothers.

That country is fortunate which receives the support of all classes, and it is significant that in America the poor are as patriotic as the rich.

Those who have nothing and who must fight their way in the world heavily handicapped by poverty are encouraged by the example of Abraham Lincoln, the greatest of commoners.

Those who are wealthy and whose blood is blue have the example of Washington before them and are made to see how the aristocrat may serve his country as well as the proletariat.

We are singularly fortunate that there are no classes in America. When we speak of Washington and Lincoln as being of different strata it is in an accommodated sense of the word and in deference to old ideas. Really they were both of one class. They were both Americans, and the example of one is equally stimulating with that of the other.

WHEN YOUR OPINIONS LESSEN NUMBER OF YOUR FRIENDS

If you cannot stand censure you are unwise to foster strong convictions and be a fearless exponent of them.

If your life aim is happiness and a certain degree of popularity you had better take stock of your tact and diplomacy.

It is possible to be diplomatic and win out honestly.

It is possible to be tactful and not compromise your position.

There are too few persons who really understand the kind of vigilance necessary to make and keep good friends.

Rather than create a feeling of ill will, the one who desires popularity sometimes overlooks or condones faults which should have a severe reprimand.

It is not doing a person a favor to gloss over mistakes when the one who makes them is guilty of much carelessness or many offenses.

Sometimes it is necessary to be vigorous in denouncing wrongdoing.

But it is not necessary to antagonize and humiliate a person by calling attention to his mistakes in the presence of others.

Such a thing as a heart-to-heart talk when a person needs advice is a kindness.

However, do not let your fear of censure keep you from loyalty to principle.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I HAD grown tired of wondering about life.

Losing out. Getting nowhere.

Everywhere I turned I saw cruelty and confusion. What was the use of it all? What were we born for if there wasn't anything better than this?

"Maybe there is something better than this, after death," I said to myself, "but where's the proof of it?

"If there's infinity and immortality, why haven't we some sign of it to encourage us while we're struggling along here? There isn't any sign—as far as I can see. We might as well be ants in an ant hill. Birth and struggle and death—that's all. Everything I look on, everything I love, ends. Just like the ant hill ends.

"Why couldn't we have just one thing that doesn't end—one thing as a witness to a greater, better life?"

I lifted my head.

There was the sky.

And my sight went on and on—like a bird set free—

A bird set free from the cage of finite things.

I had wanted a proof of infinity. There it was. The sky was infinite.

I had wanted a sign of immortality.

There it was. The sky was immortal.

I had wanted a witness to a greater boundless life.

There it was. The sky bore witness.

The sky never ended.

It did not last for a little while and then finis out.

Storms did not affect it.

Time did not exist in it.

Space did not limit it.

Things happened in it—marvelous acts of creation but they did not wear it out.

It has always been.

It would always be.

It was part of my common, human life.

But it was also part of that other, mysterious, unseen life of which I demanded a sign.

It was the Fourth Dimension set above my petty height and breadth and depth.

It was the great, shining presence of Eternity, unveiled—

And I had been accepting it as if it were a mud roof!

All the time I had been clutching at things that withered in my hands, the sky that bent above me—unwithering.

All the time I had been bumping my head against walls and breaking my heart down blind alleys, the sky had spread release before my head—

All the time I had been asking for a sign of something better than this perishable life an endless trail and waited above for me.

Waiting for me to look up—

Waiting for me to come out of my cage and fly.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

IT may be true that I shall never know the sunny charm of distant, sea-washed lands, that while the fleeting seasons come and go I shall not glimpse Earth's fair and fabled strands. On cliffs afar a storied castle waits, its vistas haunts me through long days and nights; yet I may never see its illuminated aisles and vaults myself, nor ever know its manifold delights. Seas, mountains, deserts, it may be that I shall never feel their mystery and lure, but in the daily wonder of the sky for all my losses I can find a cure. The sky brings gracious changes every hour, new wonders by its early realms possessed, and, watching all its loveliness in flower, I can forget far seas and vague moors!

FACT AND THEORY IN ASTRONOMY

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THOSE astronomers who love the speculative side of science, no less than those who confine themselves as far as possible to the ascertainment and measurement of facts, are making the sun, and with it the other stars, appear more and more wonderful to the increasing throng of readers who now turn to scientific subjects.

Each side aids the other, for a new theory, if of any value, immediately opens up another road to discovery, while, in turn, new discoveries breed fresh hypotheses.

And so the ascent goes on, with plenty of space room above, for nobody can yet imagine himself "with head so high to reach the stars."

Not long ago we briefly discussed in this column the astonishing discoveries at the Mount Wilson observatory concerning the alternations in magnetic condition of the Sunspots in the opposite hemispheres of the solar globe.

With every successive sunspot period a curious interchange takes place between the north and the south. The spots arrange themselves in pairs, or in elongated groups. In one hemisphere the leading spot of a pair or group are positive; in the opposite hemisphere, negative.

Cause Unknown

But when the next period opens the spots in each hemisphere are found to have assumed the magnetic peculiarity that characterized those of the other hemisphere during the preceding period. These are facts of observation, whose precise cause is yet to be discovered.

Now for some imposing speculations that offer strange pictures of what may be supposed to go on within the sun. Whether these make a stronger appeal to the reader than the observed facts, depends upon the constitution of his mind.

In part, of course, they are based upon observed facts.

Professor A. S. Eddington calculates that the core of th sun must have a temperature of 70,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit. Since a temperature of a few thousand degrees suffices to reduce everything that we know on the earth to a gaseous state, a temperature of millions of degrees is something beyond our power to understand.

We can only hypothetically get at its effects. Professor Eddington assumes that the energy expressed by this tremendous temperature has not been supplied from without, but was contained in the sun at the beginning and "has to last the rest of its life."

The tendency now is to regard mass and energy as virtually the same thing, while radiation is assumed to be of a material nature—substantially a return to Newton's ideas that light consists of streams of projected particles.

Now, Eddington says that the heat emitted from the sun in a year is equivalent to a mass of 120 million-million tons.

If all of the sun's hidden energy is available for transformation into heat radiation, then, since we know the amount of the sun's mass, it appears that it should all be exhausted, by radiation, in fifteen million-million years.

Kelvin's Estimate.

But Lord Kelvin, the greatest scientific calculator of his time, affirmed confidently that the sun could not last as a radiant body more than about twenty or thirty million years. However, in his day, which seems only 4 hours ago to many of us, the aviation field of science was quite restricted compared with its almost limitless extent today.

Even if he had possessed one of the modern soaring machines of speculative science, Lord Kelvin could hardly have found room to make it fly.

Another very impressive example of scientific idealism comes from Dr. J. H. Jeans, president of the Royal Astronomical Society of Great Britain. His speculation relates to the interior mechanism of the sun.

He pictures it as consisting of many superposed layers of gas rotating at different speeds. Regarding radiation as material, he thinks that as it passes outward from the intensely hot solar core, the resistance it encounters has a rapidly increasing braking action on the rotating layers, so that those near the surface have been slowed down to a small fraction of the speed of those near the center.

So the sun is an immense gaseous ball spinning many times faster at its center than at its surface. The surface, as we see, makes a rotation in about 27 days.

FAMOUS MOTHERS

WHETHER we feel that Henry VII of England had all the qualities which go toward the making of a righteous leader or not, certain it is that whatever virtues he possessed were taught him by his mother.

She was, before her marriage, Margaret Beaufort, of an Aristocratic family allied, on the father's side, to John of Gaunt. When she was fifteen she was married to the Earl of Richmond, brother to King Henry VI. A year after her marriage the boy who was later to ascend the throne was born.

After this, Lady Margaret's husband died, and she was left to bring up her child and manage her husband's estate alone. She married again, and it was after this second marriage that she was able to devote herself to her son. While he received his formal education at the hands of tutors, it was his mother who supplemented this with daily talks and sage advice.

With her influence on young Henry's career history has dealt us largely. It is enough to say that his peaceful and prudent reign as king of England was in no small measure attributable to Margaret
